POST SCRIPT FOR ACTION

BY SAMUEL B. PETTINGILL

Democratic Representative in Congress for the Third Indiana District 1935-1938.

What can the average citizen do to preserve constitutional government and our system of free enterprise?

There are many things he can do as a citizen of his home community, of his state and as a citizen of the nation.

However, the most important single thing he can do is to send strong men to Congress, Senators and representatives of character, courage, and loyalty to free institutions.

This effort should be wholly non-partisan. The real division today is not between the Democratic and Republican parties as history knows them. It is between the men and women in both great parties on the one hand who believe in the free institutions which have made this the greatest nation in the world; and on the other hand those who confess that our great effort to be free has failed and we must now submit our fate to a government which, whatever its name or label, will be a species of National Socialism.

It is an issue upon which Democrats and Republicans can stand together and must stand together.

If we are to have a new birth of freedom we must strengthen Congress. We should retain those senators and representatives, both Republican and Democrat, who have demonstrated under fire their loyalty to fundamental principles and the courage to defend them. We have an especial obligation to those who made a brave fight for the independence of Congress and the independence of the courts.

While retaining these men we should replace those senators and representatives who have not demonstrated this loyalty nor this courage.

The necessity for a strong Congress is greater today than it has ever been, for two reasons at least:

First, because the Supreme Court of the United States is no longer a predictable body.

Second, supreme court decisions already made, vest in Congress tremendous powers that heretofore we had not thought Congress possessed. What has occurred in the past few years has been in effect the equivalent of an amendment to the constitution of the United States by judicial interpretation of the most far reaching consequence.

At present the attention of the nation is largely centered upon who will be elected president. But the election of a president will not pay the national debt. It will not automatically cure unemployment either in idle dollars or idle men. It will not balance the budget. It will not stop deficits. It will not prevent the threat some day in the future of inflation, repudiation of national currency or national bankruptcy. It may not keep up out of war.

With a strong Congress, an ambitious president can do little harm, and with a weak Congress a strong president can do little good.

The judiciary can interpret only such laws as Congress enacts and the executive can administer only such laws as Congress enacts. Congress is the originating body both in legislation, taxation and the appropriation of public funds.

The fact is that your beliefs can be translated into political action far more effectively by your vote for congressman and senator than for president of the United States.

In the average congressional district about 100,000 votes are cast in the fall election, and 50,000 in the primary election. But for president of the United States about 45,000,000 votes are cast. Your vote, therefore, (Continued on Page Two)

Charles McNary Raps New Deal

Says It Is Taking Deeper Refuge in Paternalism and Statism

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 4 (AP)—Republican Senator Charles L. McNary concluded his vice-presidential campaign tonight with the charge the New Deal is "taking deeper and deeper refuge in paternalism and statism."

The senator, in an address prepared for delivery from his native city in a nationwide broadcast (CBS), said:

"The New Deal, which assumed power when our forces had been demoralized by a world economic crisis, organized a re-

Greece Reports Capture of 4,000 Italian Troops

Northern Army Reports 30,000 Italians Have Been Surrounded

Greek Defenders Said To Have Thrust More Than Six Miles in Bayonet Fighting

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—(Tuesday)—The capture of part of 4,000 Italian troops sent into Greece to cut communications was reported early today as Greece's skirted shock troops announced they had seized another hill in Aloadia and taken a quantity of Italian war material.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, dispatches said the Greek general staff reported the capture of thirty tanks and Greek sources in Belgrade said their Northern army was in possession of mountain heights surrounding 30,000 Italians.

The Greek defenders who are carrying the war to Italian-conquered Albania were said to have thrust forward ten kilometers (more than six miles) in bitter bayonet charges to seize the heights of Mount Morava in Albania, commanding the road to the Italian base of Koritza.

Advices from the front said that the Greeks had seized supplies thrown from the air by Italian planes in an attempt to relieve Fascist soldiers sent into Greece to disrupt communications.

The number of prisoners taken there was not disclosed but front advices said the surrender of the remaining force is pending.

Munitions and guns also were captured. The Greek high command communique reported that a trench mortar, machine guns and material had been taken at various points of the front.

The Greeks said five Italian planes were shot down during the day while one Greek plane failed to return. Reports from Salonika said the Italians raided that important Aegean Port city twice during the day and three Italian planes were shot down.

"The Greek shock troops advancing into Albania claimed capture of many prisoners and much war material. Fighting flared all up and down the 100-mile Albanian border, but the most intense struggles were declared to be at the two ends, around Mount Morava on the North and (Continued on Page Two)

Republicans Say They Will Gain Control of House

Outcome May Have Profound Effect on National Policy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP)—The curtain rang down tonight on one of the hottest contests for control of the House in the history of the country.

The outcome might have a profound effect on national policy during the coming two years. If, for instance, House control should go to the party that loses the presidency a system of dual government control would result, such as has occurred only a few times since the founding of the country.

As last-minute oratory stilled to await tomorrow's election returns, both Democrats and Republicans claimed victory.

Democratic campaign headquarters predicted that "we will maintain control by our present or a larger majority" to which the Republicans replied that fifty-two additional Republican seats were "in the bag" and their gain might run to eighty. The Republicans need a net gain of forty-eight to take over the House, which they last organized in 1929.

WILLKIE HAILS VICTORY AT NEW YORK RALLY

Climaxing his campaign with an address before the greatest rally in Republican history, Wendell L. Willkie declares in New York's Madison Square Garden that "Victory is on the march" in the "Battle of America." With 23,000 supporters jammed into the hall, 100,000 others stood in the streets outside to hear the G.O.P. presidential candidate over loud speakers. Pictured with Willkie in inset is Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (right), Republican national chairman.

Lewis Again Urges The Election of Wendell Willkie

Says Re-election of President Roosevelt Will Result in War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP)—John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, once again urged the election of Wendell Willkie tonight, declaring in a brief midnight broadcast (NBC) that the re-election of President Roosevelt would result in war.

"Neither President Roosevelt, nor any spokesman for his administration," Lewis said in his prepared text, "has been intellectually capable of making answer" to the charges he made in his first speech opposing the president's re-election. "Their responses have been confined to violent personal criticism, abuse and slander of this speaker."

"I assert again that the re-election of President Roosevelt will result in the nation's involvement in war," Lewis said.

"The citizen who votes for President Roosevelt's election tomorrow assumes the hazard of our nation's involvement in war. He votes to make his son, and other men's sons, available for President Roosevelt's use in the fearful and menacing game of international politics."

Roosevelt Not Worrying Over National Debt

Booth Tarkington—Many of us often wonder why we don't hear a great deal about the president's worrying over the size of our national debt. It worries all the rest of us who have even a slight understanding of the facts and of the human meaning of taxes; but we get the impression that Mr. Roosevelt isn't seriously disturbed by thoughts of the back-breaking debt his New Deal has put upon all the working people of the country.

EDITORIAL

Stop These Things Today!

VOTE for Wendell L. Willkie today and stop—
The drift into war.
The drift to National Socialism.
The concentration of power in the federal executive with control of the legislature and the courts — in a word, political dictatorship.
The strangulation of business, industry, free enterprise and opportunity.
Third and additional presidential terms.
Bureaucracy.
Unemployment.
Muddled and lagging national defense.
Class hatreds, division and disunion.
Impairment of American constitutional processes.
Labor strife.
Rising government expenses and taxes.
Unsound fiscal policies.
Haphazard and irresponsible foreign policies.
Political corruption through the blank-check use of public moneys.
Defeatism.
Inflation.
National bankruptcy.
The destruction of democracy.

A vote for Willkie today will definitely check and stop these dangerous things. And with that vote should go votes to give him the legislative support he will need to stop them.

Election of Roosevelt Will Bring More Reprisals, Dewey Declares

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4 (AP)—Thomas E. Dewey declared tonight "if the third-term campaign should be successful," then "each day of the next four years" would be "a living affront to those who created this republic, to those who gave us our freedom."

"Every day would bring us more reprisals against business, against the press, against all those who dare to disagree," the New York district attorney asserted.

"Every day would bring new appointments to those who hate our country—appointments for the Communists and the Fellow Travelers on the federal payroll. Every day would fasten new shackles upon the independence of the Congress."

"Each day would bring us closer to the point when every federal judge in the land would owe his place to the will of one man, x x x Every child who reaches voting age at the end of twelve years of one-man rule will have no recollection of any other head of his government. These are the things of which dictatorship is made."

Dewey appeared on the same Cleveland public hall platform from which President Roosevelt spoke Saturday night. His address, billed by Cleveland Republican leaders as the answer to Mr. Roosevelt's talk, was prepared for broadcast nationally (NBC-Red).

The president's address contained "the usual hymn of hate directed at those who build the factories" (Continued on Page Two)

Seven Passengers And Three Crew Members Perish

Blinding Snowstorm Is Given as Cause of Mountainside Tragedy

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 4 (AP)—A United Air Lines plane, lost in a blinding snowstorm, crashed into a mountainside today killing its ten occupants.

S. V. Hall, U.A.L. vice president in charge of Western operations, said "it looks very much as if the accident was caused by a failure of the range or radio beam."

"Our trip No. 11 reported that the range had irregularities at 5:36 a. m." (Mountain Standard time). Hall said the range was reported "O.K." at 4:24 a. m., but that it evidently failed about the time the San Francisco to Salt Lake plane, piloted by Capt. Howard Fey of Oakland, approached Salt Lake.

All indications were that the pilots had no forewarning of their danger. Although the wheels were torn away, evidence was that the landing gear was retracted at the time of the accident.

Pilot Finds Wreckage

The airplane's chronometer, only instrument to show any kind of a reading after the accident, was stopped at 3:39. This was believed to establish definitely the time of the crash, with the probability that it was set for Pacific Standard time, an hour earlier than Mountain time. The transport radiobed about 4:40 a. m. that it was 8,000 feet over Layton, twenty-five miles North of Salt Lake City, and was heading for the airport here.

Further efforts to contact the plane were futile. Shortly before noon, U.A.L. Pilot William Haws sighted the wreckage from the air.

The wreckage was strewn over a wide area about three miles North. (Continued on Page Two)

Japanese Army Withdraws from Kwangsi Province

Chinese Think Japan May Attempt To Seize Singapore Quickly

HONGKONG, Nov. 4.—Indications that the Japanese army is shortening its lines drastically by withdrawing from several occupied zones, especially in South and Central China, increased tonight.

The abandonment of its zone of occupation in Kwangsi province, South China, apparently was just about completed and Chinese columns following the retreating Japanese were said to be approaching Yanchow, Kwangtung province port through which the Japanese in Kwangsi were supplied.

Just off the coast the Japanese abandoned Waichow, an island they had used as a naval base.

Chinese dispatches reported, without independent confirmation, that similar withdrawals were in preparations in the Chungking district, across the Pearl river Estuary from Hongkong, from the Port of Swatow, Northeast of Hongkong, and from Yochow, strategic river port in Northern Hunan province, Southwest of Hankow.

Last week the Japanese were reported quitting Ichang, on the Yangtze river west of Hankow, high water mark of their Yangtze valley drive.

Chinese reports had it that the majority of Japan's garrison in Canton, chief city of South China, might be leaving and that several Japanese firms there were preparing to close.

Last week the Japanese South China command announced it was withdrawing from Nanning Kwangsi capital. The explanation was that the acquisition of air and army bases in French Indo-China, from which the Burma road and other Chinese supply routes could be bombed, made it unnecessary to retain the Kwangsi zone.

Chinese spokesmen have denied (Continued on Page Two)

Both Express Confidence As Last Appeals Are Made To Voters of the Nation

Roosevelt Says Country Will Still Be United After the Election Is Decided

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Nov. 4 (AP)—To a nation living in "the sun light and star light of peace," President Roosevelt asserted tonight that the right of the people to choose their own officers of government provides for them "the most powerful safeguard of our democracy."

He spoke in an election eve broadcast from his country home, after declaring in a statement that he awaited the verdict of the electorate tomorrow "in full confidence of vindication of the principles and policies on which we have fought the campaign."

"After the ballots are counted," Mr. Roosevelt told the country in his broadcast, "the United States of America will still be united."

There is every indication, he said, that the number of votes cast tomorrow will be by far the greatest in American history.

"That is the proof—if proof be needed—of the vitality of our democracy," he asserted.

The obligation of the people to their country does not end with the casting of votes, he added, as "every one of us has a continuing responsibility for the government which we choose."

Democracy, the president said, is not "just a word, to be shouted at political rallies and then put back into the dictionary after election day."

Mr. Roosevelt spoke from the study of his home overlooking the Hudson river.

Earlier in the evening, before a crowd gathered on the busiest street of nearby Poughkeepsie, the chief executive made his final public appearance before the election and said:

"To you the men and women of my home country, I speak for the last time here on Market street on the eve of an election."

It was the last of a series of talks made during the day to his Hudson valley "neighbors," whom he had visited on a ninety-mile "sentimental journey" by motor. Along the way, he told them he was visiting for the last time as a "candidate for office."

Aerial Blows at Axis from Kiel To Naples Made

RAF Bombers Strike at Italian and German Towns and Factories

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Aerial blows at the axis from Kiel to Naples were reported by the British Air Ministry today, along with an official forecast that "in another six months Britain will have passed Germany in aircraft, ships and guns."

With the Empire's achievement of armament superiority, said minister of labor Ernest Bevin, "The ugly Nazi regime will crumble up in Adolf Hitler's hands."

The British bombed Naples again last night, driving through low clouds and anti-aircraft fire to rain explosives on the oil tanks of the free customs district of Poggioreale and close to the industrial ports main railway station, the air ministry said.

For seventy minutes another group of RAF bombers flew over the German naval base at Kiel. Earlier Sunday, British planes operating in daylight attacked Flushing, Holland, and the Airdrome at Soesterberg.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie coupled tonight an election eve appeal for all citizens to vote with an assertion that "apathy undermines liberty."

The Republican presidential nominee, smiling and appearing confident, said in a prepared radio address (CBS) that "the greatest danger to Democracy is that the citizens, who have the final authority, may become careless about it."

"They x x x take for granted many of our Democratic institutions," he said. "They forget that such institutions must be constantly guarded."

Urges All To Vote

Terming it "the sacred duty" of all to vote in tomorrow's election, Willkie asked that no one let bad weather keep him from the polling booth.

"The issue may depend upon whether you are willing to make a trip through rain or snow to the polling place," he added.

This was the second of three radio talks scheduled by the candidate for election eve. In an afternoon address he declared that his every act as president would be designed "to keep this country out of foreign wars, and to keep it at peace."

In his mid-evening talk, he said that it was a "false and dangerous" argument to contend that the two-term tradition should be violated "on the grounds that we are faced with an international crisis."

"To trust aside that tradition is to assume that only one man has the ability to take us through recurring emergencies," Willkie continued. "That means that Democracy must surrender in the face of trouble."

The nominee asked his listeners not to vote "the way someone tells you to vote" and added: "don't let anyone high pressure you. If Democracy is to live in America, you must vote the way you believe. I say this to you no matter which way you may choose to vote."

Thanks Democrats

Willkie thanked Democrats who were supporting him, saying: "your own party has been kidnapped by a few men who have accumulated too much personal power, x x x In joining with us to fight the New Deal kidnappers, you are strengthening your own party by preserving your own form of government."

The nominee said he had asked numerous questions of President Roosevelt during the campaign but that they had not been answered.

Among his queries, Willkie said, were why the president had run up a large federal debt, why the administration had "failed to prepare to defend us" and why 9,000,000 persons were still out of work.

Earlier Willkie had promised in an afternoon speech "not to send your husbands and sons and brothers (Continued on Page Two)

Smith Says FDR Has Cut Profits

Declares Four More Years of New Deal Will Wreck Nation

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith declared tonight that "given four years more, the third term candidate will lead you over the hills to the poorhouse and the government handout."

In a nationwide radio broadcast (NBC-BLUE), sponsored by the Committee of Independent Business Men for Willkie, the 1928 Democratic presidential candidate charged that for seven years the New Deal had "discouraged private business," and added: "Values have come down, profits have been wiped (Continued on Page Two)

Germans Report Three British Ships Are Sunk

Berlin Says Nazi Airmen Bomb Airports and Industrial Objectives

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—Three British ships totalling 35,414 tons, have been sunk by a single German submarine, and five others, including a destroyer and a 10,000-ton merchant ship, have been badly damaged by Nazi bombers, the high command announced today.

It listed the U-boats' victims as the auxiliary cruisers Laurentie, 18,724 tons, and the Patroclus, 11,314 tons, and the armed merchantman Cashmere, 5,376 tons.

The submarine was in command of Lieut. Comm. Kretschmer, the command noted, with the observation that the tonnage sunk by his craft had thus been increased to 217,198. He is the second U-boat commander to top the 200,000-ton mark, the high command declared.

There were no details of the sinking or of the fate of the crews. Nor was the big merchantman identified.

Informing German sources, however, said a single plane had made a direct hit on the 19,141-ton steamer Windsor Castle several hundred miles west of Ireland.

The other ships, listed merely as "one destroyer, a patrol boat, a large merchantman and a freighter," were reported by the high command to have been hit off Kinnairds Head, on the East Coast of Scotland.

The communiqué also declared:

"Nazi raiders had bombed airport and war-important industrial objectives Sunday and Sunday night, mostly in Scotland, starting a fire at the Strathfield airport and at Wattisham DNB, official German news agency, said the Wattisham airports, hangars, barracks and planes were destroyed by fire, machine-gunning and cannonading."

"The campaign closes I have a deepened conviction that the principles for which we are fighting transcend partisanship. They involve the principles of true Americanism and the Democratic way of life."

"There is nothing partisan," he added, "in the sense of gratitude which I feel toward those who have worked to further the cause represented by the people's government."

out fear or coercion is wiser than the opinion of any one man or any small group of men."

Asks Continued Co-operation
The American people and the cause of Democracy owe much, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, to the many people "who have worked in an honorable way on each side in this campaign." He added:

"I know that after tomorrow they will all continue to cooperate in the service of Democracy, to think about it, to talk about it, and to work for it. xxx"

"After the ballots are counted the real rulers of this country will have had their say, as they have had it every two years or every four years during our whole national existence."

"After the ballots are counted the United States of America will still be united."

"Discussion among us should and will continue, for we are free citizens of a free nation. But there can be no arguments about the essential fact that in our desire to remain at peace by defending our Democracy, we are one nation and one people."

Americans, the president said, have a reservoir of religious strength which "can withstand attacks from abroad and corruption from within."

He concluded his radio address by reading to his listeners an old prayer asking the guidance of God for the nation.

Shortly before returning to Hyde Park for the broadcast, the president in his final public appearance before tomorrow's balloting spoke briefly in nearby Poughkeepsie. He said he was calling on his Hudson valley neighbors for the last time "as a candidate for office."

What people do not sufficiently realize is that the work of Congress is chiefly done by its committees.

For example, the House of Representatives is divided into forty-four committees to which all legislation is referred. These committees consist of from seven to nine up to twenty-five members. Legislation is first considered in committee. It is then rewritten. It is the committee that determines whether bills should be reported favorably or not. In the smaller group of the congressional committee the importance of even one strong congressman increases greatly.

The personnel of these committees is therefore of vital importance. What the committees do Congress generally does. Although the bills are modified on the floor of the House and Senate, nevertheless it is fair to say that what happens on the floor of the House or Senate is in effect a ratification or rejection of what the committee has done.

The bill to pack the supreme court was referred to the Senate committee of the Judiciary of eighteen members. It met its death blow by the adverse report of that committee of ten to eight; in other words, a change of two votes would have changed the result. It was fortunate for the republic that there were enough strong men on that committee.

This illustration could be repeated over and over with respect to one important bill after another.

The presence or absence of one or two strong men on a congressional committee has changed the whole course of legislation.

But not only in the committees, but in the whole body of Congress, men—not rubber stamps—are important. On the floor, it is often the case that the result is determined by a very few men giving not only votes but leadership to one side or the other. For example, in 1933, the Executive Reorganization bill was defeated in the House by only eleven votes. A change of six votes in over 400 would have changed the result.

Without making a false hero of anyone, the fact remains that the legislative branch is the heart of free institutions.

Freedom has always risen or declined with the strength or weakness of the legislative body. It can be safely stated that no legislature body ever destroyed the liberty of its constituents so long as it retained the powers given it by them. As Thomas Jefferson said: "The authority of Congress can never be weakened without injury to the Union. We have seen this proved in the last few years—Copyright 1940, by Samuel B. Pettengill."

out, opportunities for new investments have been cut off.

The address was the last of a series of five delivered by the one-time "happy warrior" against the man who twelve years ago nominated him for president.

Discussing savings and insurance under the New Deal, Smith said the bank depositors in many cases now receive two per cent interest instead of four and one-half per cent and you get it every six months instead of every three.

"The insurance companies," he went on, "tell the same story. xxx"

The former governor addressed his speech to the "forgotten men, the 45,400,000 savings bank depositors and the 64,000,000 insurance policy holders in the United States," and asserted "34,000,000 worth of your money is at stake."

Polling Places Close Earliest in South, Latest in West

By The Associated Press

Polling places will close the earliest today (Tuesday) in five Southern states and the latest in the Far West and one Eastern seaboard state—Rhode Island.

On an Eastern Standard time basis, voters will be unable to cast ballots after 4 p. m. in rural Georgia, but the polls will remain open until 7 p. m. in the cities of that state. In Kentucky the closing time is 3 p. m.; South Carolina 4 and 6 p. m.; Tennessee 5 and 7 p. m. and Virginia sunset (estimated around 5:04 p. m.).

Still using Eastern times, polls close at 10 and 11 p. m. in California, 11 p. m. in Oregon and Washington, 10 p. m. in New Mexico, and 9 and 10 p. m. in Rhode Island.

In the big electoral vote states, New York 9 p. m.; Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts 8 p. m.; Ohio 6:30 p. m.; Illinois 6 p. m.; Indiana 7 p. m.; Michigan 6 and 8 p. m.

New York states polls were originally set to close at 6 p. m., but the time was extended three hours to take care of an unprecedented vote in view of tremendous registrations. Hence, on an Eastern time basis, Empire state balloters may vote as late as those in Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Texas, and some sections of North Dakota and Wisconsin.

Seven Presidential Candidates on Ballot

By The Associated Press

Seven presidential and vice presidential tickets are before the nation's voters today (Tuesday). Only the Democratic and Republican candidates, however, are represented by electors on all forty-eight state ballots. The five minor party tickets qualified only in a portion of them. Here are the candidates and their party designations:

President—Democratic, Franklin D. Roosevelt; Republican, Wendell L. Willkie; Socialist, Norman Thomas; Socialist-Labor, John W. Aiken; Communist, Earl Browder; Prohibition, Roger W. Babson; National Greenback, John Zahnd.

Vice President—Democratic, Henry A. Wallace; Republican, Charles L. McNary; Socialist, Maynard Kruger; Socialist-Labor, Aaron M. Orange; Communist, James W. Ford; Prohibition, Edgar W. Moore; National Greenback, James E. Yates.

Willkie Says

Smith Praises Willkie

In his address, which like most of the other prepared talks was limited to one minute, former Governor Smith declared that he had never seen "any candidate at any time who has gone through all kinds of mud-slinging, whispering campaigns and undercover smears and can still keep his temper and good manners like Wendell Willkie has."

"Win, lose or draw, Wendell Willkie has set this country an old-fashioned example of clean fighting and decency."

Senator Taft said that weather reports indicated there might be rain and snow in some parts of the country today and urged all to "get out and vote xxx no matter how bad the day is."

Dewey asserted that the New Deal record "is a record of failure—one tragic failure after another—and asked whether the voters would 'break the unwritten law of our country and jeopardize the foundations of our democratic way?'"

Battle Almost Won

Chairman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the Republican National Committee, in charge of the radio rally, said that the people "are crying for a new leader—and they will not be denied. The battle of America is almost won."

Statements from other speakers included Crosby—"I personally am against the third term and plenty of other people out here (in California) are too x x x Clark Gable, Frank and Ralph Morgan, Otto Kruger, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Jimmy Stewart."

Senator Johnson—"I am convinced that a vote for Wendell Willkie means a vote for real defense without involvement in Europe's inferno of war."

Louis—"I think Mr. Roosevelt has made a lot of people just plumb lazy with relief, and taken away their pep with WPA. Just sitting home waiting for relief is no way for people to live."

Governor Stassen—"We're a practical bunch of people out here (in Minnesota). We're tired of experiments and pipe dreams and of an administration that spends money like a drunken sailor."

Speakers included Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft, both unsuccessful contenders for the Republican nomination; Alfred E. Smith 1928 Democratic standard bearer; John L. Lewis, head of the CIO; Senator Hiram Johnson (R-Calif.); Governors Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota and Raymond Baldwin of Connecticut; Joe Louis, the boxer; Bing Crosby, the singer; Mary Pickford, Raymond Moley, former Assistant Secretary of State in the Roosevelt administration; General Hugh Johnson, the columnist; Kathleen Norris, novelist; and Lewis W. Douglas, former New Deal budget director.

Seeks United Nation

Concluding the broadcast, Willkie said in a prepared talk that he had been "deeply moved by the loyalty of my fellow crusaders, and their faith in the cause for which I have been fighting."

"I want to ask you on this election day to remember only one thing: this is not the end of our crusade—this is the beginning. United we stand, divided we fall. Let us be once again a nation united."

faith in the cause for which I have been fighting.

"I want to ask you on this election day to remember only one thing: this is not the end of our crusade—this is the beginning. United we stand, divided we fall. Let us be once again a nation united."

Willkie said earlier in the program that if he were elected "I will start this crusade together as a united nation—to return to the things that our God-fearing fathers held dearest: hard work, thrift, charity, honesty, and above all, peace through strength."

Declaring that "we have fought hard, we have fought fairly for the cause we believe in," the nominee added:

"We are fighting to make sure that in the words of Lincoln, 'this nation under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth'"

Smith Praises Willkie

In his address, which like most of the other prepared talks was limited to one minute, former Governor Smith declared that he had never seen "any candidate at any time who has gone through all kinds of mud-slinging, whispering campaigns and undercover smears and can still keep his temper and good manners like Wendell Willkie has."

"Win, lose or draw, Wendell Willkie has set this country an old-fashioned example of clean fighting and decency."

Senator Taft said that weather reports indicated there might be rain and snow in some parts of the country today and urged all to "get out and vote xxx no matter how bad the day is."

Dewey asserted that the New Deal record "is a record of failure—one tragic failure after another—and asked whether the voters would 'break the unwritten law of our country and jeopardize the foundations of our democratic way?'"

Battle Almost Won

Chairman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the Republican National Committee, in charge of the radio rally, said that the people "are crying for a new leader—and they will not be denied. The battle of America is almost won."

Statements from other speakers included Crosby—"I personally am against the third term and plenty of other people out here (in California) are too x x x Clark Gable, Frank and Ralph Morgan, Otto Kruger, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Jimmy Stewart."

Senator Johnson—"I am convinced that a vote for Wendell Willkie means a vote for real defense without involvement in Europe's inferno of war."

Louis—"I think Mr. Roosevelt has made a lot of people just plumb lazy with relief, and taken away their pep with WPA. Just sitting home waiting for relief is no way for people to live."

Governor Stassen—"We're a practical bunch of people out here (in Minnesota). We're tired of experiments and pipe dreams and of an administration that spends money like a drunken sailor."

Speakers included Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft, both unsuccessful contenders for the Republican nomination; Alfred E. Smith 1928 Democratic standard bearer; John L. Lewis, head of the CIO; Senator Hiram Johnson (R-Calif.); Governors Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota and Raymond Baldwin of Connecticut; Joe Louis, the boxer; Bing Crosby, the singer; Mary Pickford, Raymond Moley, former Assistant Secretary of State in the Roosevelt administration; General Hugh Johnson, the columnist; Kathleen Norris, novelist; and Lewis W. Douglas, former New Deal budget director.

For vice president, Henry Agard Wallace, Democrat, and Charles Linna McNary, Republican.

Other major offices to be filled: thirty-five Senate seats, 432 House seats, thirty-three governorships.

The voters, 80,576,979 eligible; 50,000,000 expected to vote.

Garner Is Silent On Election Eve

UVALDE, Tex., Nov. 4 (AP)—No comment was forthcoming from the home of Vice President Garner to-night—not even concerning his whereabouts.

Lights gleamed in the little first-floor sun room in the big brick residence where the vice president usually reads after his dinner, but a question as to whether the vice president was there brought the reply from Mrs. Garner: "There will be no comment on anything from this house tonight."

A secretary added: "Everyone here is just about ready to go to bed. It was 7:30 p. m."

Uvalde expected Garner to vote tomorrow, but so far as was determined he had told none his plans.

It will be the first time in more than forty years that Garner has not been running for a public office.

Northern Army

in the vicinity of the Kalamas river on the South.

The Greeks counter-attacked north of the Kalamas river today after withstanding an Italian tank charge.

An Italian counter-attack in the Northeast sector was said to have been repulsed.

Nearer the coast, on the Epirus front where the Italians were said to have made their only important gains in eight days of subdued Blitzkrieg, the Greeks claimed they were holding their strongly fortified positions against one Fascist thrust after another.

Greek advances from Djevdjelia, Yugoslavia town on the Greek-Yugoslav frontier, said the Italians launched a mighty attack on the Epirus front during the day but failed to budge the Greeks.

The Italians preceded their land attacks with fifteen aerial bombardments against border positions while other planes flew across Greece, to blast the Port of Salonika, causing civilian casualties. On both the active fighting fronts Greek and Italian heavy artillery duelled ceaselessly.

A Reuters, British news agency, advice from Athens said the arrival of the 1120-ton British escort vessel Wyneke at Piraeus, port of Athens—possibly carrying additional British reinforcements to Greece—had been announced officially.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Nov. 4 (AP)—Greece's Northern army has advanced across the Albanian frontier in the direction of the strategic town of Koritza and the center of that town has been shelled by Greek guns, neutral sources reported tonight.

They said hilltops overlooking Koritza were in Greek hands.

The Greek advance seriously threatened an Italian force of 30,000 around Koritza, some military observers said.

Italian communication lines with advanced posts were reported cut by Greek raiding parties thoroughly familiar with the mountain country.

Meanwhile, British and Greek planes were reported to have bombed heavily the Albanian town of Agryrocastro and Italian position West of Ioannina.

By The Associated Press

DJEVDJELIA, Yugoslavia, on the Greek frontier, Nov. 4.—A heavy Italian assault in the Epirus district of Northern Greece in an attempt to regain ground lost in a recent Greek counter-attack has been beaten off completely, Greek sources on the Yugoslav frontier declared.

These advances said the Italians failed to recapture any position the Greeks had wrested from the Fascist invaders.

Two Italian planes were reported shot down in the Pirus sector and a third was downed south of Djevdjelia.

A Greek newspaper received here announced the arrival of three groups of British Royal Air Force officers with planes at Greek bases.

Travelers arriving here today from Salonika, Greece's principal Aegean sea port, estimated 700 tons of bombs were dropped in the three-day raids there.

They said the raids caused extensive property damage and many casualties, and that the greater part of Salonika's inhabitants took refuge in nearby villages.

One traveler said banks and a number of shops still were open but the food situation was becoming difficult.

He said no British planes or warships were in Salonika when he left today.

About 700 Albanians who took refuge in Yugoslavia when the fighting began have been interned.

Republicans Say

almost certain to retain rule of the Senate. The Democrats now hold sixty-nine seats, of which twenty-five are at stake this year. Five of the latter, however, are in the "Solid South," virtually assuring the Democrats of at least a majority of forty-nine.

Less noticed than the congressional races is the fact that thirty-three states are electing governors tomorrow. The Democrats now hold thirty of the forty-eight gubernatorial positions. Those at stake in tomorrow's election are now held by nineteen Democrats and fourteen Republicans. Maine already has elected Sumner Sewall, a Republican, and eleven Democratic and three Republican governors are not up for reelection.

The Republicans, in assessing their House prospects, took much encouragement from the way they added eighty-one seats to their slim membership in 1938 and have captured several Democratic seats in bye elections since.

The present composition of the House is 258 Democrats, 167 Republicans, two Progressives, one Farmer-Labor and one American Labor. There also are three Democratic and three Republican vacancies, all to be filled in tomorrow's election. The total House membership is 435.

Victor H. Harding, executive secretary of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, predicted that his party would "pick up seats in New England, the Ohio valley and Pennsylvania" and would not lose a single seat in the South or in the border states of West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky or Missouri.

639 House Candidates

The Republican Congressional Committee, on the other hand, said that an estimate Saturday by Chairman J. William Ditter of a "sure" gain of fifty-two seats did not include six "at large" seats in Ohio, New York and Illinois which the committee headquarters predicted would be "carried" by a Willkie presidential victory in those states. The at-large candidates seek victory in the entire state rather than a congressional district.

As the showdown voting neared, a checkup showed that 979 candidates were seeking 432 House seats—Maine already has chosen three Republicans in its September election.

Sixty-five seats were uncontested, of which fifty-eight were Democratic and seven Republican. Seven of the uncontested Democratic places were in Mississippi, six in Alabama, six in Arkansas, four in Georgia, five in Tennessee, two in California, two in Florida, two in Kentucky, seven in Louisiana, one in North Carolina, thirteen in Texas and three in Virginia.

Seven Republicans in California had no contests.

On the Senate side, 102 candidates are seeking thirty-five seats in tomorrow's election. Among the thirty-two seats to be filled this year for full six-year terms, Maine already has chosen Ralph O. Brewster, a Republican, leaving thirty-one. There are, however, four unexpired terms to be filled.

Make-Up of Senate

The present Senate make-up is sixty-nine Democrats, twenty-four Republicans, one Progressive, one Farmer-Labor and one Independent. At stake this year are seats held by twenty-five Democrats, eight Republicans, one Progressive and one Farmer-Labor. The Farmer-Laborite, Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, is running this time as a Republican, however.

Two Democratic seats held by Charles O. Andrews of Florida and Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi are uncontested and one Democratic the nation cannot exist, he said, "half prosperous, half depressed."

Aerial Blows at

in four nights, but the British gave no hint where the planes started from.

The Italian high command's communiqué said the British ran into heavy anti-aircraft fire which repelled the pilots, forcing them to unload their bombs in open fields, where one person was killed and several injured.

The air ministry's news service described Naples as "well defended" and said the anti-aircraft fire was more effective than on the first raid last week. Cloudy weather also hampered the fliers, the British said.

The raiders who bombed Kiel started fires soon after their arrival, the news service said, and later arrivals scored hits with heavy explosives and started two fires in the dock area.

Destruction of two Italian submarines was reported by the admiralty. (The Italians disclosed yesterday that two of their under-seas craft had "failed to return to their base.")

The Japanese claim that the Kwangsi withdrawal, for instance, was voluntary and pointed out that Nanning was abandoned a few days after strong Chinese forces launched an offensive.

In Chinking the Central Daily News, organ of the Chinese government, suggested that the Japanese withdrawals might be preparation for "a desperate Japanese attempt" to seize Singapore or the Dutch East Indies "before joint British-American pressure in the Pacific causes Japan's collapse."

east of Centerville, ten miles North of Salt Lake City. The Wasatch mountains tower to 7,000 feet in that area.

Ground parties struggled through foot-deep snow and tangled underbrush to reach the scene.

Bodies of the passengers and stewardess were piled in a jumble at the front of the cabin. Much of the cabin's furnishings had been torn loose and thrown forward.

The nose of the plane, which struck in a grove of scrub oak 250 feet from the top of a ridge and bounced or skidded another forty feet up the twenty-five degree slope, was broken away in the crash, exposing the control compartment and leaving in it a mass of twisted instruments.

Bodies Badly Broken

Both Fey and Thomas E. Sandegren, first officer, still strapped to their seats, were thrown twenty feet in front of the wreck. Their bodies were badly broken.

Just forward of the passenger's entrance the main body of the plane was snapped nearly in two. All controls hung limp and broken. The dead, not identified immediately, were listed by the airline as:

Joe Cassero, Oakland, Calif.

E. A. Dyball, Fergus Falls, Minn.

George L. Stevenson, Sacramento, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Wilson, Maywood, Ill.

Crew members, in addition to Fey, were Thomas Sandegren, Alameda, Calif., first officer, and Evelyn Sandino, Oakland, Calif., Stewardess.

Stevenson was flying to the bedside of his father who died soon after the plane crash.

"The plane was badly smashed," said Reynolds. "There was no doubt all ten persons aboard were killed outright. We could see two bodies lying in the snow just ahead of the nose of the plane. They had been thrown out by the terrific impact."

"The left wing was broken off. The fuselage was parted near the tail. The right of the fuselage was ripped open. There was no evidence of fire."

Doctor Arrested for Carrying Revolver At Willkie Rally

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (AP) — Dr. Union S. Ward, 78, a physician arrested on a gun charge at Madison Square Garden Saturday during the Republican rally at which Wendell L. Willkie spoke, was released in $500 bail today pending grand jury action.

Charged with violating the Sullivan anti-firearms law, Dr. Ward, wearing a large Willkie button on his coat, was arraigned in felony court and waived examination.

He was arrested twenty feet from where Willkie stood on a platform waving to the thousands packed into the Garden. In his left pocket was a .32 calibre revolver loaded with five cartridges, but detectives said its firing pin was faulty and that the weapon was harmless. In his apartment police found two other loaded guns.

Dr. Ward was arrested while pushing his way through the crowd toward Willkie "to get a better look." A man and a woman who said they saw him shift a gun from a trouser pocket to his overcoat summoned a policeman.

After questioning the physician, who said he once had been a cadet at the U. S. military Academy and later of the New York National Guard, Assistant District Attorney Jacob J. Rosenblum announced that he was convinced Dr. Ward meant no harm. He was an ardent Willkie supporter, the prosecutor said.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP) — George Meany, secretary-treasurer, reported Sunday that the present membership of the American Federation of Labor was 4,247,443, an increase of almost fifty per cent over the 2,860,000 total of three years ago.

Carol and Lupescu May Go to Portugal

MADRID, Nov. 4 (AP) — Former King Carol of Rumania, who has an appointment to see Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Sunner tomorrow afternoon to ask for permission to go to Portugal, arrived tonight from Seville.

Mme. Magda Lupescu and Ernest Urdarenu, former minister of the palace, accompanied him. They slipped out of the guarded station almost without being noticed and went immediately to the Palace hotel.

The Rumanian government is seeking to have Madame Lupescu and Urdarenu extradited.

American Liberties Again in Peril

THE CREED that moved our forefathers to great deeds was the simple but undying proposition that all men are born free and equal before the law and that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, among these being "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," for the maintenance of which rights governments are established by men.

This is true, however, only among peoples who have fought for these conditions of freedom and won them. Those born in Soviet Russia, or Hitler's Germany, are not endowed with an atom of freedom, but live only the lives of slaves, camp prisoners or prison convicts. Many of those who sought their liberties have been shot for their efforts.

Hitler and Stalin have denied all liberties to their subjects, and the third-term candidate here has moved for nearly eight years toward establishing a dictatorship in this country, which we almost have. We cannot forget the boast he made at the close of his 1936 campaign: that "my first term has shown that the managers of big business have met their match; my second term will show them they have met their master." That was one promise he tried his damndest to fulfill; and the notorious Chicago convention proved that he extended this idea of mastership to party delegates.

Benjamin Franklin warned his fellow patriots that "if you sacrifice liberty for security, you will have neither." That is exactly what the New Dealers have been doing—curtailing liberty on sly promises of security. "I know not what the future will bring us in material or social benefits," said one of the greatest of Nineteenth century American philosophers, "but I am positive that nothing will be achieved more precious than liberty of man, woman and child."

The fight for liberty is as old as history. Liberty can be lost. It can be regained only by heroic struggle.

Wendell Willkie made his original successful appeal to all classes by a demand for freeing business from all kinds of government shackles. The response was so sudden, so widespread, so emphatic, that many New Dealers yet do not know what happened. What happened then, what is happening now, is that the people are rebelling against industrial bondage imposed by a political dictator, as they know that will lead to political and personal slavery. They have only to see what happened in Russia and Germany when the people surrendered their liberties.

Since the dawn of history, nothing has made so strong an appeal to men as the fight for liberty. It was liberty-loving folk from various European nations who colonized this western world. The same sort of people developed its resources and founded our representative republic, based on personal liberty and freedom of opportunity, speech and conscience. When these are threatened, Americans are a unit in defending them.

The great Free State of Maryland has always stood for such principles. Today, the state, along with the other states, has an opportunity to reaffirm its faith in free government, and against attempted dictatorship. We have not forgotten the parade of 1938 in this state, led by a president presuming to dictate the choice of the people in the selection of a United States senator.

Some Things That the Voters Must Seriously Consider

VOTERS should do some serious thinking about this national election today.

They should think of the better chance they will have of keeping American boys out of war with Willkie than with Roosevelt as president.

They should think of the "draft" convention at Chicago, supported by the Sewer Gang as compared with the free and open convention at Philadelphia at which the choice of the people was nominated without the aid of machine politicians.

They should think of the fact that Hitler and Mussolini obtained their power by playing to the masses, and what happened to the masses when they got that power.

They should think of the class hatreds instilled by the New Deal, which were brought into exemplification by the rotten eggs, tomatoes and the like that bespattered a candidate for the highest office in the country and his wife.

They should think of the enormous cost of administering relief; of the small proportion of the amount allotted that actually goes to those needing relief, and of the use of relief funds to promote the political fortunes of the New Deal.

They should think of the honesty of the New Deal administration in turning down platform promises; of the manner in which its administrators have personally profited, and of the promises they will make to keep themselves in power.

They should think of the grave fact that in seven and a half years no definite improvement has been shown in the rolls of the unemployed.

They should think of the enormous waste of the New Deal the staggering increase in the national debt and the certainty that the children of today and their children must face a day of settlement.

They should think upon the subject of individual indispensability—that out of 131,000,000 persons but one man is capable of running this nation.

They should think of the big danger to our constitutional processes involved in the third term.

And finally they should think of a united nation under the leadership of a strong, understanding, honest and courageous man like Wendell Willkie—united to make this nation so strong in men and employment that no other country will dare attack us—united to destroy class hatreds—united to provide more employment—united to look after those unfortunate who need relief—united to make this nation the kind of nation for which our forefathers fought.

When they think these things through understandingly, they cannot do otherwise than go to the polls today and vote for Wendell L. Willkie and for the congressional support he must have if elected to the presidency.

Willkie Scores a Point Against the Third-Termer

THE THIRD TERM SEEKER has charged that the Republican members of Congress turned "thumbs down" on proposals looking to national defense.

To bolster that charge, the third term candidate cited the adverse vote of Republicans not on defense proposals in chief but on certain half-baked measures out of several offered looking to the same objective. He failed to note the affirmative vote of the Republicans on the proposals finally enacted as the best of the several presented in each instance.

That was a deceptive, unfair and unjust manner of stating a half truth, but it is the way in which the New Deal has been forced to defend its miserable failures. It is old-time political demagoguery, through which any rational person can easily see.

But the most devastating answer yet given to these half-truth charges has been supplied by Mr. Willkie in pointing out the plain fact that the third term candidate last June wanted Congress to shut up shop and go home. There was nothing more to be done, he indicated. Yet, if the Congress had done as he wanted, there would have been no defense program now and Congress would not have appropriated the billions voted since June for national defense.

Republican congressmen fought, not against national defense, but for the best and most sensible way of getting it. The third term candidate would have shut it off practically in its entirety, because Congress holds the purse strings and nothing could have been done without the appropriations necessary for doing it.

Coal Act Mess Is A Costly Affair

THE NEWS has heretofore referred to the bungling application by New Deal administrators of the Guffey Coal act, a measure originally designed to stabilize a seriously ailing industry. It has pointed out how the incompetent administrators at Washington bickered and wrangled for three years over its application without getting anywhere, and how, since the administration has attempted to apply the act, nothing but loss and confusion have been caused in the soft coal industry.

Later and more complete reports from the Bituminous Coal division of the department of the Interior at Washington indicate that the alarming drop in soft coal production already caused by the discriminatory application of the Guffey Coal act prices is continuing apace and it is stated that no reliable authority connected with the industry will even predict when the end of the slump will come.

This slump is costing the coal miners and their employers millions of dollars in wages lost and the same kind of loss for the railroads and their employees and for many others dependent upon prosperous conditions in the coal fields.

With Wendell L. Willkie in the presidency and a competent set of aides carrying out his policies, this mess in the coal industry will be straightened out forthwith.

That Which Sustains Willkie's Endeavor

WHATEVER the party label we choose to carry, all of us should salute Wendell Willkie as one of the most heroic figures since Abraham Lincoln. No candidate for the presidency has conducted a nation-wide campaign in such a vigorous manner nor shown such prodigious energy in trying to reach all classes of the people.

His schooling in the "University of Hard Knocks" has enabled Mr. Willkie to undertake and carry out this colossal task. But Mr. Willkie has something besides physical strength and endurance, something more than grit and determination. He is sustained by an unflinching trust in the righteousness of his cause—his crusade. His zeal is untiring, but full of confidence, and he will carry on to the last hour of the last day of the fight for liberty and justice. "Thrice armed is he whose cause is just."

As all the world "loves a lover" so everybody admires a straight shooter and a hard fighter. Willkie is just that. He asks no quarter and will give none. He stands with Lincoln, Washington, Webster, Patrick Henry, Thomas Benton, Benjamin Franklin and all the host of great champions for human freedom and their defiance of all tyrants. He is today the Winston Churchill of America. He deserves a salute. He deserves to win.

One Way To Overcome The Purchased Votes

TEN MILLION RECIPIENTS of federal pay checks.

Big city political machines.

These factors loom large upon this election day. In fact, they present the only danger to Willkie success at the polls—the danger that they may prove to be the deciding elements in the 1940 presidential contest—a contest with epochal issues that should be faced on their merits without regard to boss dictatorship and subsidization.

It has been estimated that, in order to win, Mr. Willkie will have to overcome a bought-but-not-yet-paid-for New Deal vote of approximately 13,000,000. The magnitude of this handicap becomes apparent when it is remembered that twenty-five million votes will win the election.

In a genuinely free contest, Willkie would win by an overwhelming majority. The basic question is, will the balloting of today be free? The obvious and imperative duty of all those who wish to see him elected, therefore, is to go to the polls and vote for him, and to let no excuse, sacrifice or detriment prevent them from doing so.

Genius and Brawn Depend upon More Than Test Tubes

By EDWIN C. HILL

The world appears to be tobogganing into managed economy. Geneticists insist that we must have a managed biology—the dictators are already bringing it through—and now it begins to look as if we were in for managed sport. News that the Brooklyn Dodgers took moving pictures of their last-season practice games, for slow-motion study in the winter, is too deep in the trend of the times for comfort.

Sport always has been a King-of-X domain, free from the harsh certainties and hard logic of science. It has been a land where anything could happen. Cellular champs may be lifted to the top by some sudden affluents. The palooka may miraculously find himself and smack a baseball or his ring opponent clear over into the next county. And it is never beyond the bounds of possibility that some aging ball player, ready for a waiver or the old soldiers' home, will clout the ball over the fence in the ninth, bring in four runs, make the score 5 to 4, and fill the stands with an ecstatic mania. It can happen here.

Cracking Good Story

Jacques Futotella, who went down on the Titanic, wrote some cracking good stories, one of them about an unpleasant old professor who had such a phenomenal brain that he got the Indian sign on everybody else in the world and thereafter ran the works. His knowledge of human motivations became such that he was able to apply exactly the needed stimulus to induce any desired action.

There's the danger of any one outfit filching a pattern of certainty in a universe in which everything worth while seems to have evolved from divine uncertainties. Science is interested only in jug-handled deals. Its business is to eliminate uncertainties. Perhaps that's the way to win ball games and wars, but somehow I find that, here, these meditations get into a dead-end. Two things that science doesn't seem to understand are a poet and a genius.

They figure in both baseball and war. There will be hope for the world as long as a short-ender like the Dodgers, for instance, or David vs. Goliath, or a hundred-to-one shot at Empire City can still get in the money. The economic man of Karl Marx has on closed examination, been revealed as a straw man. The biological man of the Nazis is going strong at the moment, but his birthright is written in the blood of better men and he can prevail only by the destruction of all civilization. Both claimed the fabled miracles of science for its murderous ends.

One of these synthetic men is a ghost and the other is a monster. In between lies the forever-mysterious human being of whom Walt Whitman said, "I myself am good fortune." He is chivalry and democracy, and faith and creativity—all essences of the spirit which science can't calculate or calibrate. That's why we feel downhearted about the intrusion of science on sport. As to war, we may have to go the distance with science, but we ought to be able to take our science or leave it alone.

Still Has Meaning

That tattered old "playing fields of Eton" line still has meaning. Fancy England knocking over Germany and a gent in morning coat and pipe-neck addressing a rejoicing multitude. "Men," he says, "The battles of England were won in the test tubes of Woolwich!"

It doesn't quite come off. Bring on your test tubes if we must have them, but figure in Ebbets field in the battles of America. And don't forget that the genius and brawn of a Jim Thorpe and Eddie Mahan or a Babe Ruth were not conjured up in a laboratory.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

AFTER EIGHT YEARS IN THE IRON LUNG

EDITORIAL

Cast Your Vote for Wendell Willkie

IN an ever-swelling crescendo of enthusiasm for Wendell L. Willkie—enthusiasm that has reached its peak on the eve of the election—the presidential campaign of 1940 now closes and the decision rests in the hands of the voters.

The decision will have more fateful effect on the history of the republic than any ever registered at the polls by the American electorate.

There are many issues at stake, but none transcends in importance the threat to representative republican government contained in the Roosevelt bid for a third term in the White House. Should this plot succeed at the polls, it would signalize the substitution of one-man reign for constitutional government in the United States.

All citizens, when voting for president, should keep in mind the fact that, until now, the government of the United States has not consisted of the president solely.

Wendell Willkie's pledge must be recognized as among his major declarations, that, if he is elected, he will call to serve with him "the ablest men that can be found." "This can be done," he stated, "because we know who the ablest men are, and have given no pledges anywhere to anyone for political purposes."

President Roosevelt called into his cabinet, before his third term nomination at Chicago, two Republicans—after Alfred M. Landon had turned down a bid—Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox. But this was obviously a political move, designed to bolster his third term drive.

They serve at the president's pleasure; if elected, he will form a new administration in January. Nothing has come from him during the presidential campaign defining his intentions, in event he succeeds in grabbing a third term, in this highly important respect.

His one definite step was his action in forcing the nomination of Henry A. Wallace for vice president on the unwilling Chicago convention, signifying that if he is president for another four years he would make the government more completely New Deal throughout than at any time in the past.

Is the nation to continue with Madame Perkins as secretary of Labor? As secretary of the Interior, is Harold Ickes to go on preaching and fomenting class hates? Since each man is 78 years old, the supreme court seats held by Chief Justice Hughes and Justice McReynolds seem likely to fall vacant before the end of 1944. Under Roosevelt again, may appointments to the high court which the Bar and nation can approve be expected?

Pre-eminently, the character of the next president's appointments will be an essential in securing public confidence in the government, and public unity in its support, during the critical years ahead.

The Election and National Unity

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligence

John L. Lewis's endorsement of Mr. Willkie underscores a phase of this campaign which no thoughtful citizen will dismiss lightly.

Whoever is elected president of the United States next week, the American people have before them a formidable task. It is a task of economic rehabilitation, of preparing the nation for defense against any conceivable enemy, of liquidating a staggering debt, of defraying tremendous governmental costs.

To accomplish all of this, we must be a nation of united people. Our national welfare, therefore, must lie with the president under whom this unity can be achieved.

Which of the two candidates gives the greater hope of national unity? Business thoroughly distrusts Mr. Roosevelt. He and the leaders of business and industry have been at war almost from the beginning of his first term. The conviction in the business community is overwhelming that Mr. Roosevelt is the enemy of private initiative, that he believes in and is heading toward collectivism.

Agriculture has lost its faith in Mr. Roosevelt. His trading program has not only failed to produce the foreign markets promised, but has impaired buying power in the farmer's domestic market. Moreover, the American farmer simply doesn't believe in the economy of scarcity, and realizes that sooner or later government checks will run out.

The American Federation of Labor has been at odds with Mr. Roosevelt's administration for a long time, accusing it of favoritism for the C.I.O.

And now the leader of the C.I.O.—that other great factor in the American labor movement—comes out unqualifiedly for Mr. Willkie and gives the American people some compelling reasons for the choice he makes.

In these circumstances, how is it possible to achieve national unity under Mr. Roosevelt? With so much suspicion and distrust of his leadership and purposes, it is inconceivable that the American people could achieve that singleness of purpose, that unity of action so necessary to national accomplishment.

Mr. Willkie, on the other hand, has none of these handicaps. He is, indeed, the candidate of national unity. It would be flying in the face of opportunity, going against the clear interest of the country, to reject him.

Young Workers For Willkie Are Geared in High

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 4—Never in any election have I seen such enthusiasm in youth as in young workers for Willkie. It is at high tide here in St. Louis. I have seen it wherever I have spent time and spoken recently, Lansing, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Kingston, Philadelphia, New York, St. Louis.

These young amateurs in politics have turned in a remarkable performance, showing up the professionals. This is the true "youth movement." They spend all their free hours ringing doorbells. They use only argument but they go to town.

In this metropolis of Old Man River, the Negroes who were spurred to crusading action by Joe Louis have a very effective stunt. All who get another Willkie pledge add another button to the decorations on their breasts—a kind of necklace for women, a sort of shield for men. Some are so bespangled with Willkie buttons that they look like London costers on a holiday.

Most Remarkable

When you stop to review the year, you can't avoid saying that this Willkie upsurge is one of the most remarkable popular political phenomena in our history. Roosevelt beat Landon by about eleven million votes. Even blindly fanatical New Dealers do not expect him to beat Willkie by more than two million. Willkie enthusiasts expect Roosevelt to lose by three millions. As late as March Willkie was hardly known. The first Gallup poll gave him only one per cent of the vote for nomination, although it is true that at the same time the Dunn Survey predicted his nomination.

Never Seen Before

What goes on here, a practical tyro in less than eight months switching certainly nine million and perhaps fourteen million American voters. The like of it has never been seen before. And yet Mr. Roosevelt's claqueurs say, what every newspaper man who was at the Philadelphia convention knows is not true, that there was no spontaneous uprising at Philadelphia, only a rigged convention. Roll river roll. It was the greatest political deluge of all time.

This column is too astonished to attempt to make any political prediction of the election, but if this kind of popular surge can be stopped by any kind of political jimmicks and finagling, even by the billions of dollars in New Deal spending, we might as well write democracy off as an American tradition. The people no longer rule, the janissaries do.

Warnings Repeated

I don't want to end this campaign on a note too partisan. I have been asked by men on both sides to repeat two warnings I have given several times.

The first has to do with registration. Thousands of people think and are told by slickers that, if they have registered as a Democrat, they must vote for Roosevelt; or, if registered as a Republican, they must vote for Willkie. There is no such obligation, either legal or moral. When a man gets inside that election booth he can vote his convictions at that moment, and it is his duty to do so. No matter how he registered, either as a Democrat or as a Republican, he must vote for the man whom he thinks would be best for the country, Willkie or Roosevelt, as his conscience dictates.

Pressures and Promises

The second warning is even more important. There have been pressures of threats and promises favors on both sides. Some people still don't know that nobody can ever help or hurt them because of the way they vote, unless they themselves announce it after they come out of the booth, because nobody can ever know how they vote.

It doesn't make any difference whether the pressure comes from an employer, industrial foreman, a W. P. A. overseer, a relief worker, a labor leader or a labor spy or flunk. When you get into that booth you are alone with yourself, your conscience and your God. You vote as you believe, whether for Willkie or Roosevelt, nobody will ever know. Nobody has a right to ask and if anyone does you can either not answer or give the answer such a question deserves.

The only way we can keep the America we have known is to keep the ballot free and secret. That is the way it is today.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By Walter F. Johnson, Republican Nominee for Sixth District United States Representative

Some New Dealer said the dollar ought to be modernized. I think it would be easier to modernize the New Deal. I understand it's mostly old stuff that has failed and been thrown out somewhere else. The dollar is all right if it were given a chance to multiply.

Morning Motto

History is a voice forever sounding across the centuries the laws of right and wrong. Opinions alter, manners change, creeds rise and fall, but the moral law is written on the tablets of eternity. —FROUDE.

Democrats and Republicans Both Claim They Will Carry Maryland

Summer Welles and Joe Louis Speak at Closing Rallies

BALTIMORE, Nov. 4 (AP)—Maryland's general election campaign wound up tonight in a blaze of oratory and sharply conflicting claims by Democratic and Republican leaders.

Leading off the "climax" speeches were Summer Welles, undersecretary of state, for the Democrats, and heavyweight champion Joe Louis for the Republicans, both speaking in Baltimore.

Throughout the state, congressional candidates and county leaders delivered broadcast pleas and appeared at final rallies.

W. David Tilghman, Jr., Republican state chairman, announced flatly:

"From the reports I have received I am completely confident that we will carry every county for Mr. Willkie, and, with him, our senatorial and congressional candidates."

Truman B. Cash, Democratic chairman:

"We'll bring Mr. Roosevelt into Baltimore with a nice majority and carry Baltimore by a big majority."

On the ballots tomorrow, voters must decide presidential, senatorial and six congressional contests and vote for or against six constitutional amendments and two acts of the 1939 legislature.

Nice Attends Rally
Former Gov. Harry W. Nice wound up his Republican senatorial campaign last night but attended the Louis rally; his Democratic opponent, Senator George L. Radcliffe, made an election eve broadcast closing his fight for reelection.

Best available reports from the counties tonight indicated a hot congressional fight in the First district, and close contests in the Fourth and Sixth districts.

Political observers regarded as significant Democratic Chairman Cash's statement that President Roosevelt would poll a "nice" majority of the counties and "big" majority in Baltimore.

Chief objective of Republican leaders has been a big county vote for Willkie—particularly on the Eastern Shore—on the theory that Willkie could overcome the conceded Roosevelt margin in Baltimore.

Aside from the Roosevelt-Willkie presidential race, the Democratic and Republican state tickets lined up this way:

For United States Senate:
Senator George L. Radcliffe (D); Harry W. Nice (R).
Congressional:
First: Rep. David J. Ward (D); Robert F. Duer (R).
Second: Rep. William P. Cole (D); Theodore Brown (R).
Third: Rep. Thomas D. Alexander (D); John Janetzke (R).
Fourth: John A. Meyer (D); Daniel Ellison (R).
Fifth: Rep. Lansdale G. Sasser (D); John M. Torvestad (R).
Sixth: Rep. William D. Byron (D); Walter Johnson (R).

Several Amendments
These constitutional amendments appear in the ballot:

Providing for appointment, instead of election, of the clerk of the State Court of Appeals.
Providing for changes in procedure of the Baltimore People's court.
Providing an additional judge in Seventh circuit.
Increasing the salary of the legislature from $450 to $750 a year.
Providing for new appointment of Third Circuit judges.
Providing that a governor may not succeed himself.
Providing that salaries of state judges may be taxed.
The acts of the legislature up for approval or rejection by the voters are one establishing a fisheries commission to replace the present Conservation Commission and another revising the setup of the State Industrial Accident Commission.
Election officials throughout the state predicted the vote would be heavy. The weather bureau predicted the weather would be cloudy, warm and dry.

Red Cross To Spend Several Million on Relief in China

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP)—The American Red Cross has made tentative plans to spend several million dollars for relief of China's war victims. How extensive the program will be, officials said today, is dependent upon the success of two shipments—one to free China and the other to occupied China—now en route.

A huge supply of medicine and cloth, estimated at $350,000 in value, is now in transit to free China from New York and Java. It is scheduled to reach Rangoon in December for shipment over the Burma road.

With the exception of 15,000,000 tablets of quinine purchased in Java, the medicines were bought in the United States.

Also en route to China are 6,000 sacks of rice and 1,400 sacks of cracked wheat.

These two shipments were made possible by the $500,000 federal appropriation set aside for relief of war victims.

Land Is Obtained For Anti-Aircraft Training Center

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP)—Plans for acquisition of 360,000 acres of land for a huge new anti-aircraft training center near Hinesville, Ga., were announced today by the war department.

In addition, the department disclosed plans for purchase of some 80,000 other acres in small parcels for expansion of Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Devens, Mass., and Fort Bliss, Tex.

The program also includes acquisition of 10,640 acres for an ammunition storage depot in Calhoun county, Alabama, and ten acres for a radio beacon station near Amarillo, Tex.

The land is being purchased by the land acquisition division of the soil conservation service, as the war department's agent.

According to present plans, the announcement said, approximately 547 officers and 12,580 enlisted men will be in training at the Hinesville anti-aircraft firing center by the early part of next year.

Marshall Petain Sends Message to Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP)—A message from Marshall Henri Petain of France was delivered here today and, although its contents were not made public, it was believed to contain assurances on the touchy subject of French colonial possessions in this hemisphere.

There has been concern here last recent negotiations between France and the Axis powers lead to Axis penetration of these possessions.

Ten days ago, President Roosevelt sent a message to Petain. Today the French ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, handed Petain's reply to Secretary of State Hull and then engaged in long conferences at the State Department.

Talking with newsmen later, Henry-Haye indicated that Petain's message had reinforced earlier French assurances that the negotiations with Germany and Italy did not affect the sovereignty of French colonial possessions or involve Axis use of French naval bases.

Without referring to the Petain message, Henry-Haye declared he had no worry about the possibility of American occupation of French territory in the Caribbean area, where secret United States Naval movements have attracted wide interest.

At the same time, he asserted there was no danger that France might allow Axis penetration of the possessions to threaten the security of this hemisphere.

Bucky Harris Signs New Contract with Washington Senators

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP)—Stanley (Bucky) Harris signed a new one-year contract today to manage the Senators for 1941, terminating reports that he might succeed Oscar Vit as pilot of the Cleveland Indians.

"I had always hoped that Harris would be back with the Washington club for next season and I am proud to announce it," said President Clark Griffith.

Terms of the contract were not made public but it was indicated that Harris received a raise.

Joe Louis Speaks To 7,000 Persons In Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Nov. 4 (AP)—Joe Louis, heavyweight champion, was met by approximately 7,000 negroes when he arrived by train today to speak in behalf of Wendell Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, and an audience later packed the Coliseum, which seats 7,000, to hear his short speech.

Louis said he endorsed Willkie "because he has put it down in black and white that he will do more for them (the negroes) than any other party. I also endorse Mr. Willkie because he is a fighter too."

The champion left immediately afterwards for the airport to return by plane to New York where he was to introduce Willkie at a Harlem rally.

Constitution should provide that a president may have but two terms of four years each. And Democratic Senators, Alban Barkley of Kentucky and Edward Burke of Nebraska, exactly to the same effect but whom I will not quote.

Charges Subterfuge, Trickery
"But Franklin D. Roosevelt is not willing to subscribe to the principles of those men. He either does not believe in their greatness and sincerity or else does not respect the welfare of our nation."

He doesn't want anyone else to be president. He wants to be president for a third term and maybe for a fourth or fifth term. He wants it so badly that in his headlong efforts to achieve his purpose he forced his nomination on the Democratic convention at Chicago. He did it through subterfuge and trickery and with the assistance of the superintendent of sewers of that city who concealed himself in the basement and belabored madly for hours over a separately installed loud speaker system that everybody wanted Roosevelt. And they didn't at all.

"He then compelled the same convention to nominate Henry A. Wallace as his running mate, sulkily refusing to run on the same ticket with one of the peoples' choice. He then made a statement that he would have no time to campaign for re-election but is now busily and hysterically running here and there across the country making political speeches. In those speeches, he gives no reason why he should be elected for a third term and indeed he cannot. Consequently, his remarks are necessarily confined to smear tactics against Mr. Willkie and conditions in 1932."

"This is 1940. He naturally can't tell the people why he should serve a third term as president when all the great presidents of the past refused to even consider such an improper proposition. He can't accomplish anything by making promises as to the future because he has broken too many promises in the past."

"He dare not speak of the national income because its average in the New Deal years has been consistently lower than the average in the seven year period preceding the New Deal. He cannot prudently point to tax collections because they have increased more than 195 per cent in his administration. He must stay away from spending because the New Deal has spent $56,000,000,000 or more than all presidents from Washington to Hoover inclusive, excepting the Wilson administration during the war. He must not approach the national debt proposition because he has boosted it more than $25,000,000,000 or from $163 to $340 for every man, woman and child in the United States, and the unemployment problem is also poison to him because all through his New Deal years the average number of unemployed has annually exceeded 9,000,000 men."

"In the early days of his first administration, when he still meant what he said and before he had taken his admirable 1932 platform upon which he was elected and repudiated it in all its important parts, he used to pridefully, in his talks, ask the people to 'look at the record' but if there is one thing he is anxious for the people to do now it is to close their eyes and vote for him and not look at his record. His record of repudiation, of broken promises, of unemployment, of stupendous national debt, of unprecedented taxation, is the record I have just called to your attention and I hope every one hearing me knows that I am interested in the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt, the third-term candidate, and not in his election."

distinguished citizens also helped in promoting it. After my election to Congress I also gave special attention to the matter, and on July 19, 1939, President Roosevelt authorized me to announce that he had given final approval to the project, and had allocated the necessary federal money. It thus appears that all the present Democratic candidates, President Roosevelt, Senator Radcliffe, and myself, contributed toward securing the Savage River dam for Western Maryland, and I ask your support for the president and Senator Radcliffe in this campaign just as earnestly as I ask that you support me. x x x

Praises Johnson
"I do not want to be understood as in any way criticizing the Republican nominee, my opponent," Byron said in referring to Walter P. Johnson, "he is a fine man, and was a splendid baseball player, but I think it only fair to point out that my opponent's interests lie almost entirely in the lower end of the district, and that end of the district is entirely different from this end. My opponent not only lives in Montgomery county, but he was for many years a resident of Washington, and prior to that lived in Kansas x x x As your neighbor I believe that I know more about your problems than he does, and as your neighbor I promise to give those problems my utmost attention."

Spain Takes Absolute Rule over the Approach To Strait of Gibraltar

TANGIER, Internationalized Zone of Morocco, Nov. 4 (AP)—Spanish rule over this 225-square mile area commanding the approach to the Strait of Gibraltar from the Atlantic became absolute today.

Spain, acting on her own initiative, erased the last trace of the international control she formerly shared with France, Italy and Great Britain by ordering dissolution of the four-power control commission, the legislative assembly and the international information office.

Thus, Spain realized at least one small part of her demands for what she calls her "rightful territories" in Africa.

The new order wiped out the international jurisdiction set up by the Algeiras treaty of 1911, the International convention of 1911, a protocol of 1925 and a 1928 agreement by which Spain was given police supervision.

Spanish forces occupied Tangier completely last June 14, four days after Italy entered the war and just before the French collapse.

editorial or business offices of the papers. A staff of workers will be busy gathering and tabulating returns and it will be impossible to give election news other than as outlined in the article.

Enid Hurja, publisher of Pathfinder Magazine, predicts in his final pre-election forecast that Republican nominee Wendell Willkie will be elected president by a "landslide" electoral college vote and a popular majority of more than four million.

Hurja said Willkie will receive a majority of 900,000 to a million in up-state New York against a majority of 255,000 for President Roosevelt in New York city.

His prediction of electoral votes show 353 for Willkie and 178 for Roosevelt. The Willkie total included twenty-two California votes which Hurja termed "doubtful" and the Roosevelt column included Missouri's fifteen, which he said might go for Willkie.

Hurja predicted Illinois will be in the Willkie column with a Republican downstate majority of 400,000 and the Democrats carrying Chicago by an undetermined amount.

Pennsylvania, he said, will go for Willkie even though Roosevelt carries both Allegheny and Philadelphia counties.

The New York Daily News, one of the few New York city newspapers supporting Roosevelt, predicts the president will carry New York state by a plurality over Willkie so small that the race virtually is a foregone conclusion according to final figures in the paper's poll.

The poll gives Roosevelt 56,068 and Willkie 49,392, the hairbreadth difference of less than one seventh of one per cent, in a total of 54,991 straw ballots cast for the two candidates.

The New York paper forecasts Willkie will carry all counties except Albany and that Roosevelt will carry all except Queens Borough in New York city proper. The paper predicts Roosevelt's majority in the entire state at 8,362 votes and admits Willkie can easily carry the state.

SALLY'S SALLIES

"What about tonight?" "Oh, I'm being good," he assured her. "So good that Papa Gregory has promoted me back to my old job."

"I know," she said softly. "I've heard you broadcast lots of big shows."

"Really?" He was pleased. He was going to tell her that he'd been listening in to all her shows, impelled, of course, by no more than the natural interest of a benefactor in a protégé who'd made good. Instead, he made a rather elaborate business of selecting and lighting a cigarette. He didn't want her to ask him what he thought of her performance. Kit's eyes were the kind that were likely to read evasiveness back of anything he'd said.

The music started again. Kit said, "I ought to ring up Fran and see how she's feeling. She's my part . . . manager, and she was ill tonight."

"Do you know that it's after two o'clock? And that sick people don't like to be rung up at this time? Or that little girls who sing for their supper ought to be in bed by now?"

Kit felt giddily gay. She said carefully, "What's tomorrow compared with tonight? Tonight's gala night, Mr. Healey!"

"Well, it's over now and time you were in bed."

"It is past time I was in bed," she corrected, "and now I can't go because none of my guests wants to leave. I can't go home alone."

Vance was a man of action. Kit found her arms sliding into the sleeves of her velvet-covered dress. "Only I rather imagined you'd have a low-slung, sixteen-cylinder number that either roared or purred."

Healey set the car in motion with a mighty jump. "So you expect me to be a glamor boy, too? Healey, the Robert Taylor of radio! I suppose you think I keep a side-eyed oriental valet and dine with the Garboes and Astors every night. Man-about-town Healey!"

"Aren't you?" she asked, wide-eyed, with delighted fire in her eyes.

"No, ma'am." The car coughed, stopped and started again. "I'm the kind of guy who likes to wear rubbers when it rains. I like nothing better than a quiet evening with my books and—"

Kit finished the sentence. "And a good pipe."

Tailored, Button-Front Dress

Marian Martin

PATTERN 9510

Favorite style of all smart American women is the shirtwaist. Marian Martin presents an unusually attractive version of this mode in Pattern 9510—a style designed for older women but with an air of youth. There are so many flattering details: the slimming buttoning all down the front . . . the paneled front skirt . . . the tailored yokes that go all around the shoulders, with darts below to hold the bodice softness in place. You might like the sleeves in true shirtwaist style. Then again you may have them in puffs, finished with neat bands that, together with the simple collar, may be in colorful contrast. Do add the patch pocket for extra style! Here's the sort of frock you'll wear at home or about town with equal verve!

Pattern 9510 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34-36-38-40-42-44-46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 yards 35-inch fabric.

Child Should Be Given the True Sense of Liberty

Need To Be Taught Responsibility, Self-sacrifice and Respect

BY GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Four years ago you and I were shocked to read in the newspapers that students of Harvard university booted a presidential candidate. Today we read of adults and youths, presumably of various levels of education, not only booting a presidential candidate but throwing fruit and eggs at him.

Year by year one hears more and more booting at games, fathers and mothers boogie with their sons and daughters.

We, who with all our hearts believe in our democracy and are ready, if need be, to defend it with our lives, certainly do feel ashamed of these growing manifestations of disregard for law and order in our midst, under the guise of liberty and freedom. Are these symptoms that we the people of the United States are degenerating to a level too low to be fit for real democracy?

What To Do

Should anything be done about it? Can anything be done about it? Yes. But how?

By a shift of emphasis on values in our mode of education at home and school. For many years in these United States parents and teachers have been led to believe that freedom of speech and freedom of action are the basic virtues of education. Responsibility, self-sacrifice, respect for the rights of others and regard for constituted authority have had very minor places. As a result, our younger generation has the notion that democracy means freedom to do about as you please without regard to responsibility or the rights of others.

If we are going to continue to be a democratic nation, we shall have to restore our balance to a sane philosophy and practice of education at home and school. We shall turn our backs upon the prophets of no-restraint and of do-about-as-you-please.

Should Understand No!

Beginning with the baby at home, the parents, if they want to help save democracy, will train him from the time he begins to toddle in some basic inhibitions, in the meaning of the precious word NO, the A of the alphabet of citizenship. On, yes, they will continue to encourage him to express himself but always with due regard for the right of others.

Specifically, in relation to boogie and more boogie conduct at games and other public gatherings, the school can do something right away. Let every teacher from the kindergarten upward indoctrinate the children in good manners, in self-control, in respect for the rights of others. With the fine development of student participation in the modern junior and senior high school, it should be relatively easy to cultivate a wholesome group attitude among the students so that no student would boo or do anything unsportsmanlike at a game or other public meeting without bringing down upon himself the condemnation of his fellows.

Jane Was Determined To Be a Great Singer. That's Why the Signor Did Everything He Could To Discourage Her

By ATHLYN DESHAIS

The pretty young girl looked curiously at the old crone crouched in a corner of the shabby ante-room. As though in defense, the old woman drew her ridiculous black serge cape close to her body, and turned her eyes away, at nothing.

The door creaked open, and a shriveled old man stood smiling. "Signor Frandini! Like a quivering bird, the young girl rushed to him, expectant, trusting.

He bowed. "Yes." The voice was soft, warm. "You are little Miss—"

"Fulton, Jane Fulton."
"Ah yes, Jane Fulton. I have your letter come in."

As he drew the girl inside the studio he looked back at the old woman. He paused for a second, while a melancholy look of understanding passed between them.

When the door was closed he said conversationally, "That was Rosa. She sang once." He stepped to his desk. "Sit down."

In the eerie green light the girl studied the face of the genius. And the genius looked at the child. He peered at the misty eyes. The little auburn ringlets. At the tiny hands fumbling with the plaits of her skirt.

He shook his head. "What a beautiful woman you will be, Jane." He said it as though it made him sad, but as though it was something she should know.

"Signor Frandini, I want to sing." "So you told me, in your letter. It is good that you came to me." He rested his head in his hand comfortably. "Your voice. You are bursting with anxiety for me to hear it. To tell you what I think of it. Yes?"

She fluttered.

"Well, we can hear it later. Right now, with your permission, we shall talk about you."

She smiled in impatient agreement.

"I presume you have a music teacher who says you are possessed of a great voice. That you can make a name for yourself."

She nodded.
"You are probably a lyric soprano of unusual range and quality. Maybe that they could watch you. Nurture you. Encourage you."

"She burst out. 'I'll study hard. They won't be sorry.'"

"Of course not. But wait. They want you to study opera. Commit countless arias to memory. To learn languages. You will slave for them, because they are slaving for you."

"I think it is maybe that your parents have instilled into you the realization that by expressing yourself in song you will be close to the great Source of Things. If they give of themselves, they will further convince you that material substance has long since ceased to affect them. Your letter gave me to believe that they are such parents."

His next words were measured. "Their little daughter must never sell her voice for professional or commercial reasons. She must sing in the great concert halls of the world. Utterly spirituelle."

He sat back, spent. Then, unable to look at the child, he said in a flat, toneless voice. "Rosa had such parents. Now she sits outside my door, day after day. She could not get a job in a dance hall."

Then he barked at her. "But YOU can. Go. Go now. Here is a note to Billy Goldman at the Pale Moon Cafe. Give him your money." He tossed a piece of paper into her lap. "There is his address. He makes singers in six months. Then he will give you a job, singing your heart out for drunkards. You will live. You will eat. Your parents will have peace."

He waited for her to cry, to kneel down, to beg. He stood up, watching her.

Jane rose, wished her skirt, and looked at him coldly. "I am sorry to have troubled you, Signor."

He looked into her sparkling eyes. "Your act is over. A splendid one too, as always." Then he muttered, "To think that we should end our years in comfort, on the cuts we get from Goldman, the dance hall man."

Rosa tugged at his coat. "That child. She's sweet."

"I know. It's all right. Some day we shall tell her the story of Rosa at the height of her glory."

"But she's gone."

"We'll call her back. I still have her letter. Goldman will not get her. She is too beautiful for dance halls. Besides—see?" He stepped across the floor, near the chair where Jane had sat. "She did not want my note to Goldman. She wants to be an artist. Tomorrow we call her back."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

be, without much strain, you are able to reach F sharp above high C."

Jane stirred in her excitement. "Ah, I thought so. Yes. That is good. Now let us go on. In your letter you told me that you are the daughter of poor people. But they are happy for the chance to sacrifice their very lives, if necessary, so that you shall realize your ambition."

"Yes."

"They are ready, even at this early date, to give up the security of their home. They would be willing to become servants at the very colony in which you would study."

Government Is under Obligation To Safeguard Health of Draft Army

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The Government is under a far greater obligation to safeguard the health of a conscript army which is gathered in peacetime than it would be if one were being assembled for an emergency.

From what I know of the methods that are being used, the health of the conscript soldier will be assessed very critically. No one should be allowed to be conscripted whose health is likely to break down in service. It is possible to determine such a possibility in advance. As a matter of fact, the careful examination of the draft troops will be a great advantage to the population at large for an average cross-section of the population will have, for the first time, a thorough medical examination.

Five Problems

The five great problems which present themselves to any army medical board are: (1) tuberculosis; (2) heart disease; (3) psychological states; (4) the teeth; and (5) feet and posture.

I described a few weeks ago the methods which should obtain for thorough examination for tuberculosis in order to prevent any civilian from entering the army with this disease. It is not only important for the man who has tuberculosis to know he has it, but it is important for those with whom he might be in intimate contact that he should be eliminated as a source of infection.

Heart disease, one of our commonest diseases of middle age, really begins somewhere in younger life. During the last war heart boards were set up and rather lately I believe that this time they can function even better. Not only should all rheumatic and valvular heart disease be eliminated, but those who have the slightest trace of high blood pressure should be turned down. Special boards of heart specialists will undoubtedly be appointed to investigate this matter. At the present time we have methods of examining the heart functionally to see how much work it is capable of doing. While they are not perfect they will still be very helpful in assuring us an army which would be able to stand up under prolonged conditions of strain and fatigue.

I hope that the boards in psychiatry will begin to function immediately and much better than they did during the last draft. There are many cases of incipient mental diseases among us; the individuals are considered by their companions or family to be only somewhat queer and they go on until some sharp experience teaches the family that actual mental disease is present. Such an accident might be the report of a medical board.

People so detected will undoubtedly receive treatment sooner than they otherwise would have and with more prospects of ultimate cure. For the army of men who are ORDINARILY, when a satisfactory fit in a major suit has been found, it is unwise to bid other suit lengths and thereby give the opponents information which may aid them in the defense of the hand more than it will help your side in the bidding. But there are times when advanced players find it advisable to probe the situation in a side suit, in order to determine whether possible losers there are taken care of well enough to justify a slam contract.

Questions and Answers

R. H. S. Detroit, Mich.—"What causes soreness of the ball of the feet and stiff knees?"

Answer—Sounds like weak foot arches. Often the pain is worse in the knee in these cases, due to strain on the ligaments.

W. G. Flint, Mich.—"I would like to know if drinking beer puts on weight. My husband ought to lose twenty pounds. He is careful of what he eats but drinks six bottles of beer a day."

Answer—Certainly. A bottle of beer contains about 150 calories.

If you are past middle-life you will want to give particular attention to two important body functions—one, to keep your natural stomach digestive juices flowing; two, to keep your blood rich and healthy.

Frequently, as the years advance, the stomach becomes sluggish in pouring out its digestive juices to make use of the food eaten. Likewise, wear and strain of worry, overwork, colds, and sickness often reduce one's blood strength.

Now you may rebuild your blood strength and restore sluggish stomach digestion, in the absence of an organic trouble or focal infection, with the famous S.S.S. Tonic.

S.S.S. acts two ways. In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways. First you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

join the happy thousands. S.S.S. may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again. It helps build sturdy health... that's why so many say it "makes you feel like yourself again."

★ Heavy Overcharging Alleged. The indictments, charging violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, are based on allegations of price fixing of goods sold in interstate commerce. The degree to which the ultimate cost to the consumer may have been inflated did not concern the investigators. It was said, however, one estimate was that a pair of eyeglasses selling for $20 might well bring a good profit if sold for $7.50.

had developed a "virtually errorless" method of determining the amount of alcohol in a person's blood.

The chemical process, which he said makes possible isolation of ethyl alcohol from "interfering" substances, has been utilized since 1936 in blood analysis submitted by Dr. Kozelka as evidence in court cases involving a question of intoxication.

The procedure was described in an article prepared for publication in the analytical edition of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

During the past year, Dr. Kozelka said, the method has been used by Dr. Clarence Muehlberger, Cook county (Ill.) toxicologist, in blood tests made for the Chicago police department.

The chance of error in other procedures, Dr. Kozelka said, arises from substances in the blood which "interfere" with isolation of ethyl alcohol. One such substance, he added, is methenamine, sometimes used in treating kidney and bladder disorders.

Presence of methenamine, Dr. Kozelka said, might result in other chemical tests showing a person to be under the influence of liquor when in fact he had not taken a drink.

The dandelion came by its name because the ragged edges of the plant's leaves were supposed to resemble lion's teeth. The French word for it was "dent de lion."

GOP Rally Draws
Large Audience
At Meyersdale*Attorney Is Chief Speaker;
Rain Fails To Keep Republicans Away

MEYERSDALE, Pa., Nov. 4.—Despite the torrential showers before and during meeting, there was a large turnout at the Republican rally held Friday evening in the high school auditorium.

County Chairman W. H. Beachy presided and introduced the two candidates for the legislature, Kenneth Wagner and Fred P. Haer Jr., who delivered short talks, after which Attorney Clarence L. Shaver, the wheelhorse of the Republican party in Somerset county, in a brief speech filled with information concerning the issues of the campaign, introduced the principal speaker of the evening, Attorney James Isherwood, Waynesboro, former commander of the Pennsylvania department of the American Legion, who spent two and one-half years in France during the World War. His speech was pronounced one of the best and most illuminating addresses on the present status of the affairs of the nation ever heard in Meyersdale.

D. Guy Floto was chairman of the meeting, and music throughout the evening was furnished by the Meyersdale Community Band and four young accordions from Windber, known as the "Minerettes." The meeting was concluded with a showing of motion pictures depicting the high spots of Wendell L. Willkie's campaign throughout the nation, as well as views taken of his Indiana farms.

Lodge Meeting

John N. Lint, Lee Crawford and George Burke, of the local committee on schedules and arrangements, announce that the next meeting of the degree federation of the Knights of Malta will be held in Meyersdale, when Teutonic Commandery No. 320 will confer the blue degree on a class of novices in the local lodge hall Friday evening, November 8. Participating will be members of commanderies from Cumberland and Frostburg, Md., and Berlin, A. social hour will follow.

Gospel Meetings

A gospel team of five young business men of Philadelphia was the attraction at the Main Street Brethren church Saturday evening and yesterday. Edmond Mankamyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mankamyer, large street, was the leader of the group, with Warren Zeigler, Edward Boone, Thomas Crossman and Warren Carson also participating in the program.

On Saturday evening Zeigler spoke on the subject, "Reconciliation, Justification, Conciliation." At the Sunday school hour the group divided and taught classes in the local church and also at the church at Summit Mills. At the Sunday morning worship hour, Carson talked on the theme, "God's Purpose," and in the afternoon Mankamyer discussed the topic, "Water to Swin In." The evening message was illustrated with stereopticon slides.

These young men held membership in the Beracha Church of Philadelphia, which has a worldwide ministry unique in character. It supports several missionaries on the foreign field and sponsors, city-wide evangelistic campaigns during the summer months.

Meyersdale Briefs

The November meeting of the Woman's Club will be held Wednesday afternoon instead of Tuesday evening, in the social room of the Lutheran church. Among other things, there will be an interesting book review and a pageant based upon a popular recent book, prepared by a committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Clyde Sawyer, in which living models will display styles from wardrobes dating from 1905 to 1925.

As the campaign closes, the fight on the referendum for Sunday movie is becoming quite warm. Yesterday, in all the principal churches of town, at all of the services throughout the day, speakers were present to present the anti-movie angle. The opposition for weeks has been distributing literature in support of their campaign, as well as advertising it nightly on the movie screens in the two theaters. It is predicted that the vote will be close. Five years ago, the question was submitted to a vote and was defeated.

Stone from Old Bridge
To Be Used for Jail

BERKELEY SPRINGS, W. Va., Nov. 4.—(AP)—Maybe "stone walls do not a prison make," but stone from the pillars of the Potomac bridge near here is going to confine culprits in Hancock, Md.

Flood waters which ravaged this section in 1936 destroyed the superstructure of the old span but left the pillars. Hancock officials decided to put the stone to some use and now have a corps of workers digging out the huge blocks.

The bridge was constructed in the 1890's and withstood numerous floods even though the superstructure was twisted many times.

Traffic now uses a new million dollar span, just west of the old bridge, which was built jointly by West Virginia, Maryland and the Public Works Administration.

Keyser Girl, 7,
Hurt when Car
Runs over Foot*Anna Liller Apparently Escapes Serious Injury; Drivers Released

KEYSER, W. Va., Nov. 4.—Anna Liller, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Miller Armstrong street, extended, suffered an injured right foot when an automobile driven by A. D. Bosley, Potomac Heights, ran over her on North Mineral street about 9 o'clock this morning.

Police who investigated said the girl ran against the left front fender of the car and that a rear wheel passed over the right foot. A physician who examined the child said he could not determine immediately whether or not there were any broken bones. She was taken to the home of her parents.

No charges were filed against Bosley.

Held for Grand Jury

Louis Tross, 35-year-old Keyser negro, was ordered held for the action of the January grand jury on charges of malicious assault with a deadly weapon after a hearing before Justice of the Peace C. C. Compton last evening. Bond was set at $1,000.

Tross, younger brother of Paul Tross, 41, under sentence of death at Mountsville on a charge of criminal assault upon a young white school teacher here last June, was arrested last Wednesday night after he and John Smith, South Keyser negro, had an altercation on South Mineral street, in which Smith suffered severe stab wounds.

Polling Place Moved

Grantsville Briefs

The Missionary Society of St. John's Evangelical and Reformed church will meet Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Floyd Durest near here. The meeting this month is called a week early because the regular date conflicts with the Farm Bureau banquet scheduled for that time which the ladies of the church are serving. The annual thank offering service will also be observed at Wednesday's meeting and a special program has been planned by Mrs. A. Emmons Warren, thank offering secretary. Mrs. A. M. Wright, wife of the pastor of the Salisbury church, will make a short talk, and the Rev. Mr. Wright will furnish special music. The thank offering boxes are to be returned at this session also.

At yesterday's session of the Reformed church Sunday school, plans were completed for "World Peace Sunday," which will be observed next Sunday morning. On this occasion, the entire collection will be given over to a fund to be used by missionaries for relief in foreign countries, particularly in China. "World Peace Sunday" is being observed in this manner by all Reformed churches, and a similar observance will be held again December 15.

The Adult Home Economics class, which is being conducted at the school in the evenings by Mrs. Julius C. Ranninger Jr., will meet Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A definite time for future meetings will be decided at this session.

Mrs. H. P. Miller will entertain the Grantsville Community Club Wednesday afternoon at her home at Salisbury, Pa. The topic for this evening will be "Dressing Your Personality." The roll-call will be announced at the banquet.

J., were seized by police at Scranton, Pa., in connection with the death of a boarding house landlady and for a series of holdups. According to police, Bujalski accidentally wounded himself and killed Mrs. Theresa Brenner as he was cleaning his gun in the boarding house. Two police officers are shown with the boys.

Both Democrats and GOP Confident
As W. Va. Campaign Comes to End*Three Major Candidates Make Final Appeals to the Electorate

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 4.—Three of West Virginia's major political candidates made their last appeals to the voters tonight, sharing attention with the nationwide broadcasts set up by the two major parties.

Senator M. M. Neely, Democratic nominee for governor, spoke to a homecoming rally at Fairmont, a traditional affair for the veteran legislator upon returning from his many campaigns.

Mayor D. Boone Dawson of Charleston, Republican gubernatorial candidate, spoke over the radio from his home city after spending the day working with party leaders in Kanawha county.

Thomas B. Sweeney of Wheeling, Republican nominee for Senate, spoke twice over the radio from Wheeling.

Judge Harley M. Kilgore, Democratic nominee for the Senate who has been off the stump since his induction into military service as judge advocate of the National Guard, alone of the major candidates, was inactive on election eve. The polls will open at 6:30 a. m. when voters will begin counting votes in 2,389 precincts. The total vote has been variously estimated at from 800,000 to 900,000—probably about 875,000 from a registration of around 1,090,000.

Unofficial estimates, based on reports to the Secretary of State from twenty-five of the fifty-five counties, have placed the registered Democratic majority at about 17,000. Both parties waited for the result on election eve with expressions of confidence—the Democrats certain the state would remain in their column and Republicans predicting they would upset registered majorities.

Senator Neely, in a statement from Fairmont, predicted a Democratic majority of 200,000 in the state. "If it's clear day, and said he would not be surprised if Maine goes to the Roosevelt parade" nationally. He had reference to the fact, Republicans carried only Maine and Vermont in 1936.

Neely added that unfavorable weather might cut the Democratic majority to "170,000."

New Fire Truck
Put in Service
At Frostburg*$10,000 Vehicle, One of Largest in County, Displayed to Public

FROSTBURG, Nov. 4.—The $10,000 American-LaFrance "quad" fire truck, recently purchased by the Frostburg Fire Department, arrived here Saturday and was driven about the community in the afternoon and parked in front of the Frostburg Department Store building, formerly Hite's store, East Main street, in the evening.

The truck, one of the largest in Allegany county, consists of a pumper, ladder racks with a capacity of 250 feet of ladders, and a hose section with 1,000 feet of 2 1/2-inch fire hose. A feature is a flood light system which will aid materially in fighting fires at night.

The committee which made the purchase with the approval of the department, consisted of Bernard Hughes, Cyril Nickel, John D. Keller, Jesse Jacobs and George Kraft.

Burglary Probed

A robbery reported Saturday morning at the restaurant of Frank Ruffo, which adjoins the Ruffo residence, West Main street, is being investigated by the local police force. Entrance to the building was gained by the removal of a side window sash. Mr. Ruffo reported the loss of $20 worth of cigarettes, shotgun and shells, a small amount of cash and his entire stock of candy and small package goods.

Police report other attempts at robbery in the same neighborhood. The doors on the garages of Herman Bauer and Robert Huston were damaged in an attempt to enter the buildings; a window was broken in the rear of the Shuss grocery store and a motor car of Albert Layman in the same neighborhood was drained of gasoline.

New Gas Station

Frostburg's newest automobile service station, located at 225 East Main street, was opened this week for business by its owners, Chalmers Livingstone and Charles Wiebrecht. The building, constructed of steel throughout, is located on the lot formerly owned by the estate of John Rupp.

The building and lot represents an investment of approximately $15,000, and the improvement adds much to the attractiveness of East Main street, which, on account of the location of Frostburg's new high school on Eckhart flat, is becoming an increasingly important section of the community.

Mr. Wiebrecht, for many years connected with local service stations, will be the manager of the new concern.

Turf Champions for 1940 Hard to Figure

Wacky Set-Up Is "Worst in Years," Dopesters Admit

Only Challenged Has Clear Claim in Handicap Class

Race for Filly Honors of Years Is Most Scrambled

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP)—If you're a little weary of cross word puzzles, handies and anagrams these Fall afternoons, just try to figure out the racing champions of 1940 for a change.

Not in years has there been such a wacky set-up. Only Challenged among the handicap horses and Level Best among the two-year old fillies seem to have definite claims, but you can pick up a pretty good argument around any race track even about these two.

Among the three-year-old colts, you'd have to choose from among Bimelech, Midland, Gailahadon, Sweepida, Sirocco, Your Chance and Penelon. The three-year-old filly race is a wide open affair among Salamina, Fairy Chant and Damaged Goods.

And right now it looks like the throne for the two-year-old colts will have to be a three-sacker, at least, because Our Boots, Whirlaway and last week's Pimlico Futurity winner, Bold Irishman, all have a claim stuck out.

Challenged's Claim Best

Challenged has the best right to the handicap title. He has won five of seven starts this year, including last week's Pimlico Special. Yet, Haish has finished in front of him twice, and if he hadn't suddenly gone sour there's no telling what might have happened in the Pimlico Special. And, while Eighty is retired for the year, he won more money than any of the others.

At the start of the year, the boys were willing to hand the three-year-old crown to Bimelech on a platter. But Gailahadon beat him in the Derby and Stroon ran his legs off in the Arlington Classic before his hoof injury was discovered. Then Penelon hit his peak, but he, like Bimelech, was injured.

Then it was Your Chance, but he turned out to be what trackmen call an "excuse horse," mostly finishing second and he would have won if— Finally, Midland, the internationally-bred colt from Oregon, reached his top form and right now is second only to Bimelech among the year's leading money winners.

Among the Fillies

Among the fillies, Fairy Chant, victor in the San Margareta Handicap in California and the Gazelle and Pimlico Oaks on this coast, tops the money winners with $46,750. But Half Price Headley's Salamina defied the odds to be the lot over a distance and went right up near the head of the class with a recent score over Haish. Damaged Goods, who won the Acorn and Coaching Club Oaks, also must be ranked right up there.

Level Best's claim among the two-year-old fillies is based on the fact she won six stakes, was beaten only once by another filly in 11 outings and has never finished out of the money. Yet, among the division's money winners, this best daughter of Equipoise is second to Valinda Myth.

As for the colts, the situation is positively hilarious. Our Boots and Whirlaway had the juvenile money winners, but they both wound up eating Bold Irishman's dust in the Pimlico Futurity last Saturday.

Nemerof League

The Reds won two of the Indians. The Tigers took a pair from the Giants, and the Dodgers downed the Yankees in two of three in Nemerof League matches on the Savoy Alley.

Their Play Merits Nation-Wide Attention in Collegiate Grid Circles Navy Gets Crack At Fightin' Irish This Saturday

Game in Baltimore City Stadium Crowns State Season

BALTIMORE, Nov. 4.—Elmer Layden, the Thin Man of Notre Dame, is bringing three teams of "Fightin' Irish" here Saturday to parade over the Stadium turf, thus it becomes Navy's turn to try to halt the Ramblers' surge toward a national championship, and you can count on the Tars to go "all out" in their effort.

This Navy-Notre Dame clash is the piece de resistance of the local gridiron season and some 60,000 fans are expected to see what the experts said before Saturday's close 7-0 win over Army, is the best Irish team, or teams, in a long time.

Replete with brilliant runners (despite Saturday) both on power plays and outside sweeps, replete with such operatives as Milt Picup, Steve Juzvik, Bob Saggau, Bob Harrgrave, Steve Bagarus, Bernie Craminus and many more, Notre Dame has added air strength to a fast-hitting offense.

Says Skipper Layden: "We have much better passing and kicking than last year. And we are faster, too. Yes, we have speeded up quite a bit. Although you wouldn't have thought so Saturday."

Hold to Fundamentals: "But, while the forward pass has become a more definite part of our attack than any time in recent years," he goes on, "we're still a blocking and tackling team. The pass is no good unless there is a strong running game to support it—and vice versa."

So it looks like fandon will see a team with just about everything moving against the Navy this week end.

Layden's scouts, who've viewed the Sailors ever since the opening game, have reported faithfully to their boss and all dope sheets have given Navy a real buildup. This will be the chief Navy team Notre Dame has met in some time.

While chief interest will be centered around the Stadium party—what Midshipman Bill Busick, Howie Clark, Sammy Boothe, Al Cameron, Cliff Lenz and a pair of capable Sailor lines can do against the three-team Irish—other State eleven will seek recognition from the fans.

Hoyas at Maryland: Maryland, for instance, has quite a battle listed up for College Park. It takes on no less a power house than Jack Hagerty's Georgetown machine. These Terp-Hoy matches always have been replete with thrills and the one Saturday should be no exception to the rule.

The Old Liners intend to show their best hand against their neighbors from Washington, but it'll be a real job to keep such fellows as Lou Ghecas, Jules Koshlap, Jack Doolan and Joe McFadden, guiding genius of the team on the field, from causing too much havoc.

Shoremans Up-State: Up at Westminster, Western Maryland meets a State rival in Washington College and looks a bit too good, for an improving effort.

Hopkins, showing no concern over Navy and Notre Dame being at the Stadium, plays Blue Ridge at Homewood Field. This game marks their first meeting on the gridiron and Blue Ridge appears to have an edge on the Blue Jays.

In the only other game, Mount St. Mary's plays host to Frank Dobson's Apprentice School team from Norfolk.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—Baseball's two DiMaggios here, Joe and Dominic, are ready and willing to do their training stretch in the Army, if and when called.

So is their brother Tom, who acts in an advisory capacity on contracts and runs the restaurant when Joe is belting balls for the Yankees and Dominic is doing the same for the Red Sox.

Joe drew a draft number in the 4000 class. Dominic is number 8333. He wears heavy glasses of necessity, but wants no exemption because of the eye defect.

Joe makes no claims as a home-run hitter in the public-speaking league. Of military training he said: "It's something that has to be done. I'm ready any time they are. So is Dominic. The pitching can't be any tougher than it is in the American League."

Tom, the businessman of the family, was only two months short of missing the draft.

Vince, the next oldest brother, is 40th on the draft list at Hermosa Beach, but has a wife and child.

Minnesota Moves Up To Challenge Cornell

Gophers Replace Notre Dame in AP College Grid Poll

Bernie Bierman's Crew Wins Close Ones but Wins Just the Same

Michigan Placed Third in Spot for Clash on Saturday

By BILL BONI

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP)—Midwestern eleven still are breathing on Cornell's neck in the 1940 football ranking race, but this week it is Minnesota's Gophers who have displaced the Irish of Notre Dame as closest pursuers of the all-conquering Ithacans.

The fifth of the weekly Associated Press ranking polls, with 178 football experts throughout the country participating, finds Cornell on top as it has been since the start of the season. The big red, three games away from its second successive season without defeat, was placed first on 119 ballots and second on 24 for 1,560 points.

But the way Minnesota has worked its way through an awesome schedule—winning close ones, perhaps, but winning every one—put the Gophers in second place, only 140 points away. The Bernie Bierman powerhouse, runner-up in first-place votes with 18, was ranked second by 72 of the experts as it piled up 1,420 points.

Just as last week, when they came through by the margin of an extra point over Northwestern, the Gophers stand the best chance of improving their position and the greatest risk of being knocked down this coming week end. They will meet a Michigan team that, like Northwestern, also comes up to this contest undefeated and untied, with the added advantage of a week's rest. The Wolverines, as a week ago, are given third place.

Two other decisive games next Saturday will involve members of the "first tier." Texas A. and M. will take its strings of 17 straight victories into action against Southern Methodist, undefeated, tied only by Pitt, and ranked 14th.

Meanwhile Stanford, No. 6 in the rankings, will play once-beaten Washington, No. 11, in the game that should send one or the other on to the coast conference title and nomination for the Rose Bowl.

This, incidentally, is quite a season for streaks. In addition to Georgetown's 23-game string, Cornell has come through 17 games with only one tie; Texas A. and M. has won 17 in a row, and Tennessee, not counting post-season games, has won 28 in succession since losing by 13-7 to Vanderbilt in 1937.

The standing (points given on 10-9-8-7-6, etc. basis, first-place votes in parentheses):

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
1. Cornell	11	0	0	1,560
2. Minnesota	10	0	0	1,420
3. Michigan	10	0	0	1,360
4. Texas A. and M.	10	0	0	1,180
5. Tennessee	10	0	0	1,120
6. Stanford	9	0	0	1,060
7. Notre Dame	8	0	0	1,000
8. Northwestern	8	0	0	940
9. Southern Methodist	7	0	0	880
10. Washington	7	0	0	820

Some Midweek Notes On Football Teams

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Midweek football notes: or, how I held up the Denver stagecoach:

In the final callover, the professional betting men were laying two to one that the United States quarterback would stay in the game.

Indiana is having a bad football season, if that's got any bearing on the election. But so is Harvard, so is Harvard. And even those roughnecks at Groton are being pushed around.

Before the Army-Notre Dame game, midwestern reporters were throwing fits of ecstasy about the fighting Irish, and a midwestern reporter can throw a fit of ecstasy fifty yards against the wind. One of them said that Notre Dame could give the Royal Air Force four-teen points. Another swooned dead away in admiration of Elmer Layden's team. I know he was dead away, because when the waiter handed him his check, he didn't answer.

Now, by way of explanation of what happened Saturday, the boys argue that Army was underrated and is really a great team. Ask Lafayette if Army is a great team. Or ask Harvard. Or ask Williams. Or, for that matter, ask Army. They wouldn't try to kid you.

Army is not a great team, and the Lardner bloodhound detective service, which hardly ever sleeps, is now beginning to suspect that neither is Notre Dame. A horse doesn't have to kick us in the teeth.

Three major football conference titles will be virtually decided this coming Saturday, and my hunch is that a parlay bet on the three "underdogs" might pay a handsome dividend, viz. Southern Methodist over Texas A. and M., Michigan over Minnesota, and Washington over Stanford.

The Georgetown-Boston college game on November 16 is building up into something somewhat terrific.

With Tennessee, the question is, which bowl will they go to?

Speaking of coaches giving signals, the only signal Ducky Pond has at Yale is for a sacrifice, and Yale goes right on making sacrifices.

When I was playing football for the old school, the coach had a special signal for me. Lifting his thumb, he would jerk it sharply over his shoulder in the direction of the shower-baths.

Navy has beaten itself so often that if Notre Dame fails to show up for the game this week, the mid-dies will put their second team on the field and beat Navy again, from sheer force of habit.

Tempe, Arizona, was a bowl team last year. Saturday they were held scoreless by flagstaff teachers, which is now awaiting offers from Pasadena and New Orleans.

Glancing absent-mindedly over Idaho's record the other day, president Robert Hutchins of Chicago leaped to his feet and exclaimed: "Zounds! I thought I abolished football here, but I see my team is still playing." The fact is, Idaho is an entirely different college from Chicago, but has managed to borrow some of Chicago's football secrets.

Michigan is going to put Tom Harmon's sweater, with the number 98, on exhibition in a glass cabinet. What Minnesota gamblers want to know is—will they take the sweater off Harmon before doing this, or does Tom go into the cabinet too? and if so, can it be arranged before the end of the week?

Only Allegany of City Grid Elevens Home This Week

Meets Martinsburg Saturday with Fort Hill at Hagerstown

LaSalle Plays Calvert Hall at Baltimore on Friday

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The annual city scholastic football whirl will continue its slowing down process this week with only one of three clashes involving local elevens scheduled to be played here.

The Fort Hill Sentinels and Allegany High's Campers will clear the decks for the annual Thanksgiving Day clash by opposing Cumberland Valley Athletic League foes Saturday afternoon when the Hill-toppers are scheduled to invade Hagerstown and the West Siders are slated to tangle with the Martinsburg (W. Va.) High Silver Whippets at Fort Hill stadium.

LaSalle's Explorers, who have three games remaining on their card, will get one out of the way Friday when they journey to Baltimore for an afternoon tussle with Calvert Hall at St. Joseph's College gridiron on the Frederick road at Irvington. The following Friday, the Blue and gold will be host to Ridgeley and on the night of November 20, the Explorers will ring down the curtain against the West Virginia School for the Deaf and Deaf of Romney.

The CVAL championship will probably hinge on the outcome of the Fort Hill-Hagerstown skirmish. Both teams are unbeaten in loop competition with Fort Hill's record one victory and a tie and Hagerstown's three victories. The Sentinels, who must win to stay in the running, will be favored over Allegany in their league finale.

The LaSalle-Calvert Hall and Allegany-Martinsburg contests should be close with out-of-town clubs given a little better than an even chance to win. Calvert Hall has lost about as many games as it has won in the tough Baltimore city competition, while Martinsburg rates an edge over the Campers on the strength of its scorching tie with Fort Hill.

Other important tilts scheduled for the coming weekend include two Potomac Valley Conference skirmishes next Monday, Armistice Day, when Keyser will close against Piedmont at Keyser and the Moorefield Yellow Jackets will drop the curtain against the Petersburg Vikings.

The conference championship will be at stake Friday afternoon when Ridgeley, which shared the title with Parsons last year, battles Romney at Ridgeley. Both teams are unbeaten in conference competition.

Ridgeley has won three and tied one while Romney has copped four and is unscathed.

Coach Dana Lough's Potomac State Catamounts, who have failed to tally a touchdown in losing seven consecutive battles, hope to end the famine in their annual Homecoming day tussle Saturday against the Shepherd College Rams.

Other games on the slate, both Friday afternoon, are Berkeley Springs and Harpers Ferry at the latter place and Handley of Winchester, Va., at Charles Town.

Michigan Is One-Man Team but 10 Other Players Do Their Bit To Help Harmon Star Every Week

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The old professor was sharpening pencils as his Monday morning class of football coaches trooped in, some of the members looking happy, others not even looking.

Old Professor—Good morning gentlemen. Anybody need a pencil? I have a couple of extra points here.

Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern—Don't mention extra points to me. That's what beat us Saturday. But they are part of the game, and we have lost to a great team in Minnesota. I guess our jinx over Minnesota has expired. Frank is a great back, the best we have met this fall.

Bernie Bierman, Minnesota—We won by a point and that just about tells the story of the game. It could have gone either way.

Old Professor—I get the point, gentlemen, even if Northwestern didn't. Mr. Wade, where have you been hiding that Duke power?

Wallace Wade, Duke—Frankly, professor, I was surprised at the fine work of our team.

Bill Alexander, Georgia Tech—There isn't much to say, except that Duke has a grand team.

Old Professor—Anything wrong Mr. Larsen?

Swede Larsen, Navy—Yes indeed. Our Navy team is a lot better than it looked against Penn.

George Munger, Penn.—The Navy line is the best we have faced this year, better than Michigan. We got some swell breaks.

Old Professor—What are you trying to figure out how a team as good as Tulane could lose three games. It's the best team I've seen since I've been at Clemson.

Red Dawson, Tulane—Naturally we're elated to beat a team as good as Clemson, which was dangerous all the way and deserves to rate high nationally.

Old Professor—What adds up to nothing, Mr. Wieman?

Tad Wieman, Princeton—A Princeton-Harvard game, I guess. Harvard just had too many good tacklers for us.

Dick Harlow, Harvard—Our pass defense is the best thing we have. We went out determined not to give Princeton the ball game, and we didn't.

Old Professor—What are you doing with that big key, Mr. Shaughnessy?

Clark Shaughnessy, Stanford—I'm going to wind up my boys to be sure they don't run down next week.

Babe Horrell, UCLA—We're not giving up. We'll win one sometime if we ever get any breaks.

Old Professor—Attention, please, while we listen to the bell.

Matty Bell, S.M.U.—I'm sure happy to win that one from Texas. My boys were happy. Texas had me plenty worried the first half, though.

Dana Bible, Texas—We played against a fine team. Matty Bell's boys had a fine defense against our running plays.

Old Professor—There goes another bell, and this time it means our time is up. I'm sorry Ozzie Solem of Syracuse isn't here to tell us how it feels to meet a string of undefeated teams. He's met three now, and has another coming up. I suppose you can call Syracuse the maker of champions.

Old Professor—Attention, please, while we listen to the bell.

In Memoriam

Had remembrance of my dear boy, Bernard Lipson, who died seven years ago today, November 5, 1933.

As the months and years roll by,
We miss him more each day.
They say time brings back old memories,
Of a loved one gone to rest.

No one knows our aching heart,
For the one who passed away.
Memory is the only thing
That still can call his name.

Overheated Flue Damages Greene Street Home

Three Companies Respond To Call; Damage Estimated at $1,500

Three fire companies last night responded to a call at 714 Greene street where an overheated flue caused damage estimated at between $1,500 and $2,000.

The fire started in the basement of the two-family house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reinhard and Mrs. Edith N. Beachy and her mother, Mrs. Sarah L. Naughton.

The Reinhard family were about to go to bed when they noticed smoke coming through the living room floor and put in a call to the West Side fire station at 5:45 o'clock. The Central station received a call at 5:50 and the East Side at 6:02.

According to Chief Reid C. Hoenicka, the situation "looked bad" for a few minutes but the firemen soon had the fire under control although considerable smoke and water damage was done.

The rafters above the stoker-fed furnace in the basement caught fire and ate through the first floor near the living room fireplace. The fire was difficult to combat since it had spread through the flooring.

The living room of the quarters occupied by the Reinhard family was damaged with the wallpaper blistered by the intense heat. The flooring was damaged and the furniture and other effects scorched.

Mrs. Beachy and her mother, Mrs. Naughton, were also getting ready to go to bed when they noticed the smoke. Mrs. Beachy, a dressmaker, had considerable stock on hand. The smoke did little damage to this stock, it was reported.

A large crowd gathered on Greene street shortly after the arrival of the three fire engines. Police were directed to the scene to direct traffic.

News-Times Will Offer Telephone Election Service

Supplementary Reports also Will Be Broadcast over Station WTBO

Telephone and radio election service will be offered tonight by the Cumberland News and the Evening Times.

Persons seeking returns are advised to ask the telephone operator for "Election News." Do not call any News or Times numbers for results, as none will be available except over "Election News." The News-Times will furnish this special service from a central bureau, starting at 9:30 o'clock.

When you get your call through to "Election News" do not ask questions but listen to the bulletins being broadcast. Hang up after you have heard the results on hand. Few local returns are expected to be received before 11 o'clock.

To relieve the pressure occasioned by the numerous calls that will be received at the central bureau, a supplementary service on general election returns will be broadcast from radio station WTBO from 7 p. m. until 2 a. m. under the sponsorship of the Cumberland News-Times.

Please keep in mind that if you are seeking returns do not ask for a number, but ask the telephone operator for "Election News."

Local Man Is Fined $10 For Violating City Code

IN FINAL APPEAL—Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Allegheny county, brought the GOP campaign to a grand finale last evening with an enlightening public address entitled, "Keep America Safe for Democracy."

Wilson Delivers Final Campaign Talk

Wilson's address was the tenth and final of a series of talks delivered during the campaign urging the election of Wendell Willkie, Harry W. Nice and Walter P. Johnson.

"Tomorrow," said Wilson, speaking over radio station WTBO "for the first time in the history of our great and free presidential elections, millions and millions of patriotic and loyal voters will cast their ballots with the apprehension, yes, even with the fear that they henceforth may never again be freely permitted to elect the man of their choice, the president of our country."

Says America Is Trembling

"And that is why so many of us in America today are trembling—trembling not from dangers that are from without, not from threatened aggressions from Hitler or Mussolini or other totalitarian powers but from dangers from within and, indeed, from within our very own federal government."

"The question 'What is This Danger?' naturally presents itself. The answer is simple. This danger is simply the fact that we have for the first time a full-fledged third-term candidate. He has already served almost eight years as president, and in so doing has surrounded himself with more than 1,000,000 tax paid, and ambitious public salaried employees who now, under his leadership or him under theirs, (and it doesn't matter which) refuse to vacate the office of the presidency and other high official government positions and positively will not do so except by compulsion. No such a serious matter ever before threatened our country."

In classical literature, Caesar was twice offered a kingly crown which he did thrice refuse. In our own history, George Washington was begged to accept a third term as president which he declined, thereby setting up the time-honored precedent against it. Thomas Jefferson, discussing it said, "Should a president consent to be a candidate for a third election, I trust he would be rejected on this demonstration of ambitious views." Andrew Jackson said, "It would seem advisable to limit the service of the chief magistrate to a single term of either four or six years." And Woodrow Wilson, "It is intolerable that any president should be permitted to determine who should succeed him—himself or another."

Among our present-day statesmen, Democratic senator, Carter Glass, said, "I may say that I am utterly opposed to a third term for president of the United States, and I am inclined to agree with Mr. Jefferson in his statement that the Registrants drawn in the draft lottery are still eligible to enlist in the United States Navy. Enlistment in the Navy is allowable at any time until a man is sworn in to the draft army.

Applicants must be not less than eighteen years of age and under thirty-one years of age, unmarried and of sound physique.

Prendergast Urges Voters To Support Democratic Ticket

Quotes Speech of Senator Norris on Third Term Question

Michael F. Prendergast, who managed the Radcliffe primary campaign in Allegheny county and who has had some differences with other Democratic county leaders in the current campaign, last night threw his support to the Democratic ticket in a personally sponsored radio broadcast.

Respecting the head of the ticket, Prendergast quoted from a recent speech by United States Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, concerning the third term question.

"I am content to take this word of a statesman, beloved and admired by his Republican and Democratic colleagues alike," Prendergast said. "Most assuredly Senator Norris, an independent always, would be the first to challenge any effort by anyone to set up a dictatorship in America."

"As a Democrat," Prendergast said, "I will support Senator Radcliffe and I ask your help to return to office this man who has always voted right for all the people of Maryland."

"As a Democrat and as a Western Marylander, I ask that you consider well the re-election of Congressman William D. Byron, a native Marylander and a Western Marylander. Irrespective of party affiliations all three of these candidates deserve the vote of the entire population of Allegheny county for with them in the offices to which they seek re-election Allegheny county has enjoyed many of the legislative benefits for which they are, if not entirely, at least in some measure responsible."

Among our present-day statesmen, Democratic senator, Carter Glass, said, "I may say that I am utterly opposed to a third term for president of the United States, and I am inclined to agree with Mr. Jefferson in his statement that the
